Livermore to aid Guatemala

Sister City unit asks for disaster supplies

Livermore's Sister City Organization is sending out an urgent plea for tents, bandages and powdered milk to send to Guatemala.

The bandages should be 6-inch wide strips torn from clean, old sheets and rolled up.

The tents will serve as shelters in areas devastated by the two massive earthquakes that hit Guatemala Wednesday and Friday. Because so many of the buildings were made of adobe and crumbled in the tremors, damage was widespread and the death toll stands at at least 6,000.

Pat Lundberg, president of Livermore's 10-year-old sister city organization, will be collecting donations at her home today at 1125

Lomitas Ave. She plans to drive the supplies tomorrow to the national guard armory in San Francisco, a depot from which supplies from all over the Bay Area will be flown to the stricken country on Tuesday.

Second in priority after the tents, bandages and powdered milk come cash, clothing, food and blankets.

All Bank of America branches are collecting donations, with checks to be made out to "Emergency Relief Committee of Guatemala."

The money may be mailed or dropped off at a local bank.

Other supplies may be dropped off at the Lundberg home or at the offices of "LASO" (Latin American Services Organization), the new group located at Second and M Streets in downtown Livermore.

Details will be publicized soon on a broad drive the Red Cross is organizing.

Livermore's sister city is Quezaltenango, Guatemala's second largest city and one that reportedly has not suffered as badly as most in the two quakes.

Mrs. Lundberg has not been able to get through to anyone in Quezaltenango, although ham radio operator John Doggett of Pleasanton has made ham radio contact with English-speaking missionaries there.

One badly hit area is Chimaltenango, a village where a mission is located which is aided each year by St. Raymond's Church, Dublin.

St. Raymond's will sponsor a special collection today for the mission. Reportedly, 70 per cent of the buildings in the village were leveled in the quakes.

In addition to today's collection, there will be a fundraiser in two weeks to benefit the mission.

Mayor appeals

LIVERMORE — Mayor Archer Futch appealed to all citizens of Livermore yesterday to contribute vitally needed supplies to help meet the emergency needs of the people of Guatemala.

He made the following statement: "Because of our close ties and friendship with the people of Guatemala, the city will make a special effort to assist the Sister City organization and the Latin America Service Organization in seeing that the needed supplies are collected and delivered to the Armory in San Francisco."

The city will also donate needed medical supplies from its emergency field hospital.

Councilman hit on fire, police stand

PLEASANTON — Council challenger Frank Brandes is not happy with Councilman Roger McLain's position on the recent firefighters' controversy.

Brandes told The Times in a press release that McLain "has not and does not intend to provide even the minimum police or fire protection services to the city. He has been in a position to solve these problems in the past, but only now at election time does he claim to have solutions."

McLain's response was: "Ridiculous. It is incorrect. I am as concerned (about the fire department) as anyone, even more so, having been a police and fireman. I know the difficulties under which they work. Being understaffed makes their job more difficult and dangerous."

"To suggest I have no interest in the situation is ridiculous. It is tantamount to saying that I don't care if our police or firemen get killed," said McLain. He said the public can come to the council's help by understanding the need for more tax money to add more police and fire personnel. Or if the assessed value of the community rises, it might be possible to add more personnel without raising taxes, he said.

Brandes retorted that McLain's concern "is fine, but he hasn't done anything to correct the problem. You have to have three men on an engine company, not two. The city has spent an additional $30,000 and added no additional fire suppression capability. If elected, I will make sure the minimum fire capabilities will be met."

"McLain has been in a position to solve it and he hasn't done it. He is talking about credibility and about public input when 400 people fill the city council chambers and why doesn't the council listen?" "I suggest voters come to candidates night where these issues are explained more fully," said Brandes. "I have explained my position specifically. I would go back to having a fire chief, put two of the captains back in the stations, possibly as lieutenants, and make sure there are three men in each engine company."

Ecology element

Pleasanton council slates GP hearing

PLEASANTON — The city council will take its last formal look at the new general plan tomorrow after the planning commission screened it last week.

The council will conduct a public hearing on the document, specifically on the environmental element, the last of a dozen elements to go into the plan. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the justice court.

The growth rate, low and moderate income housing and the Livermore airport were the general plan topics which concerned the planning commission last week.

Planning Director Robert Harris explained that the two percent growth rate is an annual average over the next 10 or 20 years. It does not literally mean that the city will grow only two percent and no more in any given year, he said. In fact it is likely the city will grow at any possible rate as sewer connections become available, at least until demands have been satisfied from developers who sued the city over promised sewer connections.

Although an audience member asked for a definition of low and moderate income housing, none was forthcoming from the commission or staff. Commissioner Dave Shepherd said he "encouraged the city staff to see the 13 percent goal as more than pie in the sky."

Chairman Walt Wood asked the staff if there is any way to build in a requirement with developers that they meet the 13 percent goal. Harris responded that the city could grant preference points in the development schedule for developers who offer low and moderate income housing as has been done in Petaluma.

Wood also wondered about Pleasanton's ability to control its air space. Livermore is building 16 hangars at its airport and has condemned 35 acres for expansion of its facilities. It could mean more air traffic over Pleasanton Meadows, said Wood.

Commissioner Howard Garrigan noted the concern over the airport has been going on for a long time. "We keep hearing reports about expansion of their airport and they keep saying, 'Pleasanton, we are listening to your concerns,' and meanwhile they go out and build more hangars," said Garrigan.

Wrong ID on skier

PLEASANTON — That snow picture in The Times Friday which showed someone skiing in a Pleasanton park incorrectly identified one of the skiers. He was Tom Atherton, son of Bob Atherton, an Amador High School teacher. Thanks to former Amador faculty member Helen Varden for spotting the error.

Times offers protection

Less than 24 cents a week to buy protection that lasts 24 hours a day.

That is the offer available to readers of The Times. A supplemental accident policy offered through this newspaper provides up to $10,000 in benefits from a single accident. The premium is just $11.50 annually.

Turn to page 4 in today's Times for further details on how to participate in this unique offer.

LASO's Anna Maria Osorio is ready to accept donations for Guatemala at the office at M and Second Streets, Livermore; anyone who can donate tents, bandages or powdered milk should take them today to the Lundberg residence, 1125 Lomitas Ave. (Times photo)

Analysis of economy

County reports on valley

Alameda County Bureau

HAYWARD — Carving the valley's economy into four diverse but interrelated factions, the county planning department last week released the last of its three part background analysis of the Livermore-Amador Valley.

The economic report, preceded by one on land use and another on environmental resources and constraints, will be used by the county planning commission at public hearings "to prepare plan alternatives" for the valley.

The hearings have not been scheduled yet, but are planned for "several months" in the future. Copies of the reports may be obtained from the planning department, 399 Elmhurst St., Hayward.

The valley's land industries — agriculture and quarry operations — have diminished in the influence on the valley's economy, according to the report. The oldest industry, it dominated the valley until the suburban boom of the 1950's and 1960's.

It is no longer influential in terms of employment and income, but has taken on increasing importance in terms of resources and the valley's proximity to urban development.

The land will be a "significant factor in defining the extent and pattern of urbanization," the report states.

Research, on the other hand, is the "backbone of employment ... and the basis for a balanced economy, one in which people both live and work in the same community."

The report estimates 53 percent of the valley's employed population works in the valley, while the rest commute. This "growing attachment to the bay-side cities as well as areas to the north in the San Ramon Valley" leads the department to characterize the valley "to a great degree a bedroom community."

Livermore's population is more inclined to work in the valley, while Dublin's and Pleasanton's tend to commute, according to the report.

Ironically, there are 21,100 jobs in the valley filled by some 14,000 valley residents, giving the area an influx of 7,100 commuters. The imbalance occurs mainly in service and government, including research industries.

Valley families "had the highest median incomes" of any planning unit studied in Alameda County, according to the report, but residents apparently are at a loss to find an outlet for their money.

"When the retail sales in Livermore and Pleasanton are compared with other cities of a similar size, it is apparent that both have a low volume of retail business."

"Of eight places of approximately the same population which were compared to Livermore in retail sales, Livermore had lower sales than all but two. Of nine places of approximately the same population which were compared to Pleasanton, Pleasanton had lower sales than all but one," the 40 page report states.

Livermore is compared with San Rafael, Walnut Creek, Hayward, Carmichael and several Southern California cities; Pleasanton is grouped with Pleasant Hill, Petaluma, Antioch, Novato, Newark, Saratoga and three non-Bay Area suburbs.

County planning commissioner George Spiliotopoulos of Pleasanton charged the report used outdated figures and was almost useless as a premise for commission decisions.

The retail sales figures were drawn from 1972, while other comparisons rely heavily on the 1970 census.

The report could be characterized as an historical overview of the area's economy. It traces the history of the valley from the influx of servicemen at Camp Parks during World War II through the suburban boom of the 1950's and 1960's and on to the "no growth, slow growth" debate that has characterized the 1970's.

Pleasanton Ridge petition

Developer asks plan delay

Alameda County Bureau

HAYWARD — Carl Nipper's proposed Rancho de la Cresta on the Pleasanton Ridge will appear before the county planning commission tomorrow — but only as a formal request for continuance on his petition for a preliminary land use and redevelopment plan.

Commissioners also will hear a request for a report on conformance with the general plan of the proposed abandonment of all county portions of Santos Ranch Road.

The board of supervisors last month moved to consider permanently locking or abandoning the steep, twisting road on the east side of Pleasanton Ridge.

A county planning department spokesman said Nipper's hearing was requested by the developer's attorney in order to keep the issue legally active. A formal request to resume debate in April on the 600 acre development will be heard.

Nipper wants to put 300 mixed, cluster and detached single family residences on the western slope of the ridge. The development has been opposed by Sunol residents who charge Rancho de la Cresta is premature and would drastically and irrevocably transform their rural town.

A smaller proposed development on the opposing Sunol Ridge recently was turned down by the board of supervisors. They denied Edwin Burr's application on grounds the access road would be too steep and hazardous.

Nipper needs to secure an established municipal public to supervise his proposed package sewage treatment plan. Both Pleasanton and Zone 7 of the Alameda County Flood Control and Water Conservation District have turned him down in the past.

(The overseer agency is a policy of the Regional Water Quality Control Board).

Although rebuffed in the past, Nipper reportedly is still after a local agency to meet the regional board's requirement.

Commissioners also will hear requests for zoning ordinance amendments for:

●Reclassification of four parcels of 18 acres zoned retail business and single family residence on San Ramon Road, west side near Dublin Boulevard.

●Reclassification of four acres on San Ramon Road in Dublin belonging to George K. Hansen from single family residences to retail business.

●Reclassification of two parcels containing 3.77 acres at 11760 and 11826 Dublin Blvd. from administrative offices to retail business. The property is owned by George and Gladys Lydixsen.

●Reclassification of John Banke's one acre at 11746 Dublin Blvd from administrative office to retail business.

●Reclassification of Barry Spivak's and Chris Berattis' 9.44 acres at Andrade Road and I-680 near Sunol from highway frontage to agricultural district.

Commissioners also will hear a request for amendments to the zoning and quarry ordinances on "A" district provisions relating to administrative offices as a conditional use (part 1) and quarry ordinance (part 2) relating to administrative offices in conjunction with quarry and sand and gravel permit modification.

Carl Nipper's Rancho de la Cresta is back before the county planning commission. Edwin Burr's nearby proposed development was disapproved by the board of supervisors last month.

Pleasanton council eyes bike trails

PLEASANTON — The city council will hear reports on bicycle trails, a recent city-school conference regarding school crossing guard priorities and possible hiring of a consultant on a traffic signal installation at First and Neal Streets tomorrow.

Also on the agenda are approval of a lease with the county over the justice court building, which now houses the city attorney and the housing authority, and a public hearing on a Stoneridge housing development which the council is expected to continue because the planning commission continued the issue last week.

The crossing guard report will be given by Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire. The council approved a crossing guard for Harvest Road and Black Avenue recently and agreed to look into guards for four or five other intersections, with the priorities worked out with the school district.

School contingency plan to be prepared

The Amador Valley Joint High School District's contingency plan, in case the tax revenue measure on the June 8 ballot fails, will be developed over the next one to two months and only after consulting with district schools and the parent-schools council.

Dr. Bruce Newlin, Amador-Pleasanton superintendent, said the aforementioned plan will be taken in order to be ready for any eventuality.

The district will seek an increase of 62.68 cents in the tax revenue limit over a three year span beginning in 1976-77. The hike would authorize the district's tax rate to go from $2.13 to $2.38 for 1976-77, to $2.54 in 1977-78 and ultimately to $2.74.

In other business Tuesday, trustees heard a detailed report from the School Attendance Review Board, composed of Mike Connolly, Amador Adult Education; Candy Ingram, Hotline; Pat Nordin, Pleasanton Police Department; Karen Albertson, parent, and Gloria Jones, district director of pupil personnel services.

The board deals with truancy problems in the district. SARB makes certain that the school district has done everything in its power to provide an alternative program or needed resources so that the truant need not be referred to county authorities.

SARB provides for intensive guidance to meet the special needs of pupils with school attendance problems.

Trustees also heard reports from food services, the P.E. Elective Committee, 1974-75 annual audit and a vocational education follow-up.

Rev. Moon follower David Emerson shares a bit of brotherhood with Doug, 12, Dana, 13 (Times photo)

Valley Moon follower defends Korean cult

LIVERMORE — David Emerson doesn't know why all the fuss about "Moonies."

The dark-eyed, soft-voiced UC Berkeley engineering student has been a follower of the notorious Korean cult leader, the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, for more than a year.

He lives in a "Moonie" commune near campus. He works at the Aladdin Cafe and donates his earnings to the Unification Church which Moon leads. And he can't see why all the flap about a movement that, as far as David is concerned, teaches love and brotherhood.

The Unification Church is a worldwide movement with its leader a self-proclaimed Messiah who lives opulently near Tarrytown, N.Y. Although Moon makes only rare appearances, his followers are everywhere, seeking converts.

David Emerson first heard about the Unification Church "through people on campus" in the fall of 1974, during his junior year.

He went to a speech in San Francisco in December and was invited to a weekend in Mendocino to learn more about the movement.

"There were about 30 of us — mainly young — and we stayed in trailers," David recalls. "Things were presented logically. Nothing was ever forced on you."

He said the weekend involved small-group discussions of the precepts of Moon's religion: "Living in communities, developing human potential through relationships," according to David.

The ideal love he learned about in "Moonie" groups was a total concern for others, a round-the-clock dedication to doing things for other people and not thinking of oneself.

Asked how he puts those teachings to use in his everyday life, David said he does his share of chores in the "creative community project" where he lives, as well as holding down his part-time job.

He isn't sure what he will be doing when he gets his engineering degree from Berkeley this spring.

David expresses mild surprise (one characteristic of fervent "Moonies" is said to be their constantly mild and gentle, smiling manner) at the idea that students are "brainwashed" or forced into the religious program against the will of their families.

"They encourage families to get involved," he contradicts. His own family, including his mother, Lisa, a Livermore elementary-school teacher, have all visited the Mendocino retreat and see nothing wrong with it — although none of them have taken to the religion.

"He's such a sensible boy and such a good student, I'm sure he wouldn't be doing this unless it was worthwhile," Mrs. Emerson says.

However, she has heard of at least one local student who has dropped out of the movement.

The Emersons have enjoyed meals at the Unification Church's headquarters in Berkeley ("good food," report little brothers Dana, 13, and Doug, 12.)

They seem undisturbed by reports that the Rev. Moon wants to make himself a world political leader ("The whole world is in my hand, and I will conquer and subjugate the world" is a quote attributed to him.)

They don't believe reports that cult followers tend to be maladjusted, insecure people.

And they are bemused by reports that some parents will kidnap their 20-year-old students to get them away from Moon's charismatic influence.

The idea prompts David to shake his head and say with a smile:

"I can't see parents treating their kids like that."

Daylight time may begin in March

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With Daylight Saving Time set to open a six month run from April 25 to Oct. 31, moves are under way in Congress to extend it to eight months.

Convinced that crime, energy use and traffic accidents drop during Daylight Saving Time, the Senate Commerce Committee has approved legislation to return most states to Daylight Saving for roughly eight months, from the first Sunday in March through the second Sunday in November this year and next.

The House Commerce Committee has yet to hold hearings on a new Daylight Saving Time bill.

A move to keep the six-month period was defeated by the Senate Commerce Committee in favor of eight months and one week of DST and three months and three weeks of standard time this year and in 1977.

During that two-year period, the Department of Transportation would reach final conclusions on how Americans fare under DST. The Senate committee says the department's interim report shows "small but significant benefits to the general public from an additional two months of advanced (DST) time each year."

Using the department data, the panel predicts permanent eight-month DST would mean at least a 1 per cent cut in electricity usage, which translates to about 100,000 barrels of oil per day; a saving of 50 lives and 2,000 injuries in traffic accidents each year; no adverse effect on school children who have to wait for buses in early morning darkness, and likely reductions in street crime.

Perhaps one of the most intriguing facets of the daylight savings debate is that the Senate bill would extend daylight savings not for eight months, as in 1975, but for eight months and one week.

LAVWA to review pipeline financing

PLEASANTON — The Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency will receive a draft financial management report from its consulting firms Stone and Youngberg and Ralph Anderson on Feb. 10.

LAVWA will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Pleasanton

Justice Court, 30 W. Angela St., Pleasanton.

The consultants will present preliminary findings in their financial management study. The firm is considering possible financing methods for the LAVWA pipeline, and will make recommendations on management

The LAVWA board also will review preparation of the final environmental impact statement for its cross valley effluent disposal project.

Public testimony on the draft EIS was taken in a hearing Jan. 13 and written statements were accepted through the end of January.

The board will consider amendments in the memo of ironed out at a joint LAVWA-Zone 7 committee meeting last week.

LAVWA representatives agreed to uphold the zone's standards for the underground basin in return for a promise by the zone it would not "go into the sewage business" without the approval of the member agencies of LAVWA.

LAVWA is expected to approve the draft, but a zone okay is less than secure.

LAVWA is a joint powers agency of Livermore, Pleasanton, and Valley Community Services District.

Wet weather slows BART riders' trip

OAKLAND — Wet rails mean bad news for Bay Area Rapid Transit riders.

And since precise stopping is crucial, BART engineers say that when it rains or snows, the trains are run at 25 per cent slower than normal in order to stop at the same spot in both wet and dry weather.

The slowdown occurs despite that fact it may take BART riders 15 or 20 minutes longer to get where they're going.

Although BART is operating in an area where it normally rains during autumn, winter and spring months, few provisions have been made to accommodate wet weather.

BART spokesman Bob Krahe noted that the system's trains are equipped with anti-skid braking devices to "cut down on wheel slip."

But those devices don't make up for the problems caused by wet tracks.

Krahe noted BART is more automated than other rapid transit systems, and can only be operated manually no faster than 25 miles per hour.

Otherwise the stopping and starting of trains is controlled by a computer in BART's Oakland headquarters building.

Charles Kramer, BART director of safety, said that district engineers are working on modifications to solve the problem.

Those modifications would entail replacing trackside equipment which gives trains speed and braking signals.

BART, he said, wasn't designed to run at lower speeds when the tracks are wet.

Operating at the lower speeds "was something we initiated ourselves," Kramer said.

The trains could slide through the stations, he noted.

Asked if the trains don't meet design specifications, Kramer said, "That's the kind of question I can't answer."

"The braking rate designed isn't achievable by these cars," Kramer acknowledged.

Cronin School's Betty Roberts

Early education takes dedicated efforts

(This is the 13th in a continuing series on The Classroom Teacher, featuring teachers in the Murray, Pleasanton, Amador and San Ramon school districts. TODAY: Betty Roberts and the Early Childhood Education program at Cronin School.)

DUBLIN — Building a solid foundation for an educational program new to a particular school takes the dedicated efforts of not only teachers and administrators, but parents.

Add to that primary age children who are receptive to ideas and methods. It would seem the foundation has been placed with precision and care at Cronin School, after discussing the first-year Early Childhood Education program with Betty Roberts.

Betty is teacher coordinator of the program at the school, which received a very favorable evaluation from a two-person State Department of Education team just last week.

Betty came to the ECE assignment this school year after 2½ years as a reading specialist at Cronin.

A graduate of San Jose State with a degree in elementary education, she initially taught in Vallejo for two years — third grade — commuting daily from her home in San Ramon.

The arduous trek to Vallejo, where she taught at a school in an economically-deprived area, finally became too much to bear and she applied locally.

Betty is now in her sixth year in the Murray district, all being at Cronin, the pretty little school on York Drive.

In addition to being a reading specialist, she has taught third grade. Dublin and Frederiksen preceded Cronin in the ECE program by one year.

The York Drive school was third on the priority list and work toward instituting the program at Cronin began with a needs survey of the community last summer. The school parent advisory committee and staff then met to determine how ECE would be implemented in Cronin's kindergarten, first, second and third grades.

ECE procedure stipulates a minimum 51 per cent parent interest in order for the program to go ahead. Any decisions concerning the total program must go through the parent advisory board, which meets a minimum of once a month — but usually bi-monthly at Cronin.

The next critical and necessary step was writing a separate component for each of 12 areas. Mrs. Roberts, principal Ryan McKeon and staff members were assisted by parents during this stage.

The writing is actually putting down on paper procedures and goals for each of the components — language development, mathematics, multi-cultural, reading, parent participation, staff development, self-concept development, guidance, health, library and speech.

The staff — "component people" — wrote the rough draft for Cronin's ECE program, Betty refined and rewrote it and it then went to the parent advisory board for review. After further re-working, Mrs. Roberts went back over each component area.

From the very beginning, according to Mrs. Roberts and McKeon, their has been a high degree of parent involvement — a 93 per cent return on the needs assessment survey at the outset and participation of 54 (of 70 possible) parents in the classroom. A 10 to 1 ratio of students to instructors is required by law.

Betty remarks that the program is averaging 65 hours of volunteer aid each week — some of this being assistance in the cross-age program where middle school students come in to help primary youngsters.

The careful and meticulous planning has obviously paid off. ECE programs are given a 1 to 5, unsatisfactory to excellent rating in each component area. Cronin received "4's" or very good in a majority and utilizing instructional materials. Recommendations included setting aside one Monday per month for in-service training and planning, continuing development of the multi-cultural unit and, "if an additional aide is hired, a qualified minority person should be hired to integrate the teaching staff and provide positive daily interaction with a minority."

Both McKeon and Roberts are quick to note the continuing contribution made by Sue Gloeckler, parent coordinator for ECE and chairman of the parent advisory board.

Changes and amendments are already being considered for the 1976-77 program.

"I think we know more about the youngsters' needs this year," Betty concludes. "We know exactly where each one is (through a series of check lists). Each teacher has an overall list and can see where the whole class is at a glance."

In addition to Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Gloeckler and McKeon, the various teams in the ECE program include Mary Huffman, Pam Wiese, Marge Bowles, Chris Martinez, Sandy Henriott, Julie Beeson, Sandy Hanson, Vy Evans, Sharon Williams and Jan Nielsen in "A" pod; Pat Ransdell, Anne Madrid and Gayle Malfatti in "B" pod, and Dolores Brown, library; Jack Taylor, psychologist; Sally Hill, nurse; Natalie Forrest, counselor.

Mori moves bill to protect farm act

Assemblyman Floyd Mori (D-Pleasanton) introduced on Wednesday an urgency bill appropriating $3.8 million necessary to keep the Agricultural Labor Relations Board operating for the rest of the fiscal year.

The compromise legislation is designed to end the stalemate threatening the new agricultural labor relations act.

Mori's stand on the ALRB has incurred the wrath of farm workers who claim Mori is buckling under to the demands of the growers by placing conditions on the ALRB.

The ALRB was set up last year under the Agricultural Labor Relations Act to oversee secret ballot elections and collective bargaining for farmworkers.

The Mori measure, AB 2983, proposes four amendments to the farm labor law which he believes will help win the support of a number of reluctant rural Democrats and Republican lawmakers.

Mori said the issue has polarized into "a game of chicken," with the Brown administration demanding the extra money while some opponents press for as many as eight changes in the law.

Amendments in the Mori bill would:

- Require the ALRB to observe more closely the precedents of the National Labor Relations Act.
- Extend the period for conducting secret ballot representative elections from seven to 15 days after a petition is received.

- Permit rather than require the Board to conduct hearings when an election is challenged.
- Remove reimbursement provisions for farmworkers when employers engage in unfair labor practices or refuse to bargain.

"These amendments will cause the Board to operate more efficiently and reduce legal costs to both the Board and particularly to small growers," said Mori.

He said he did not favor a wholesale dismantling of the ALRB, but noted "there are not enough votes in the Legislature to approve the appropriation with no strings attached."

"The important thing is to protect the historic gains made last year with the enactment of the farm labor act," said Mori. "Rather than let all that progress evaporate into thin air, each of the two competing viewpoints must give a little."

Hearings on AB 2983 will be held before the Assembly Labor Relations Committee in Sacramento on Feb. 17.

DUBLIN — Valley Community Services District's policy on recreational use of Murray School District facilities will be reviewed by the VCSD Citizens' Advisory Committee on Parks and Recreation Tuesday night.

The group will meet at 8 p.m. in the VCSD Board Conference Room, 7051 Dublin Blvd.

The CAC discussion follows last week's meeting of VCSD directors and MSD school board members.

Though MSD officials argued a good case could be made for using the school grounds for both school and district recreational purposes, they said the school district did not have the funds to continue supporting non-school activities.

The problem may ease when the three VCSD parks (Athan Downs, Boone Acres, and the Dublin Sports Grounds) are developed.

The CAC will review plans and specifications for the 22-acre Athan Downs park.

The CAC advises the VCSD board on parks and recreation programs. Members are appointed by VCSD directors.

Dublin builder is suspended

A Dublin contractor is under "indefinite suspension" following disciplinary action taken by the Contractors' State License Board in Sacramento.

Donald R. Schilling, 7570 Carlow Way, was subjected to the punitive action effective Dec 10, 1975 for "abandoning a project without legal excuse. Failing to complete a project for the price stated in the contract."

The action was one of five such suspensions handed Alameda County contractors in the month of January.

Women find fulfillment in the ministry

By REINA WHITNEY

"Jesus is a feminist" declared the Evangelical Women's Caucus held in Washington, D.C., determined to spread the word. The conference was the first demonstration of national solidarity among church women discontented with the tradition of male leadership in churches and homes.

Pat Driscoll, co-founder of the Christian Womanity Movement won an international prize for her prayer of liberated women in which she says: "The gospel tells of a woman in a crowd who cried out: 'Blessed is the womb that bore you and the breasts that nursed you.' And you, Jesus, acknowledged the compliment. But then you emphasized an even greater value of women: 'Rather blessed are they who hear the word of God and keep it!' By those words you made clear that women are not only child-bearers but rather are fully human persons capable of hearing the responding to God's word."

We have in the valley at least seven notable women who have heard the word of God and are responding in a most positive way — as ministers of the gospel.

All of them tell of a life-long desire to serve their own particular church completely; to dedicate the rest of their lives to the service of God. They weren't satisfied to be the fund-raiser, the dutiful wife of the minister who traditionally visits the homebound, bakes for the socials or heads the bazaar committee.

Sunday after Sunday, year after year, the pulpits proclaimed the Good News that there is "neither Jew or Greek, slave nor freeman, male or female, for you are all one in Christ, Jesus." Nobody, least of all women, regarded it as more than pleasant, time-worn poetry.

They listened, but did not hear the fact that the early church did have women preachers, teachers and prophets, following the example of Jesus, who treated them as equals.

It took the courage of a Magdalen for these women to defy tradition, the "indignation of the Pharisees," the resentment and snide remarks, the influence of what people will think and say, the misunderstanding of members of their own sex, to follow and minister to the only One whose approval they sought or cared about. They had no other choice — "I chose you, you did not choose Me."

The Reverend Shirley Woods, assistant pastor of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church in Livermore, was ordained in 1970. According to one of her admiring congregations, "she has been a most valued member of our congregation since 1957."

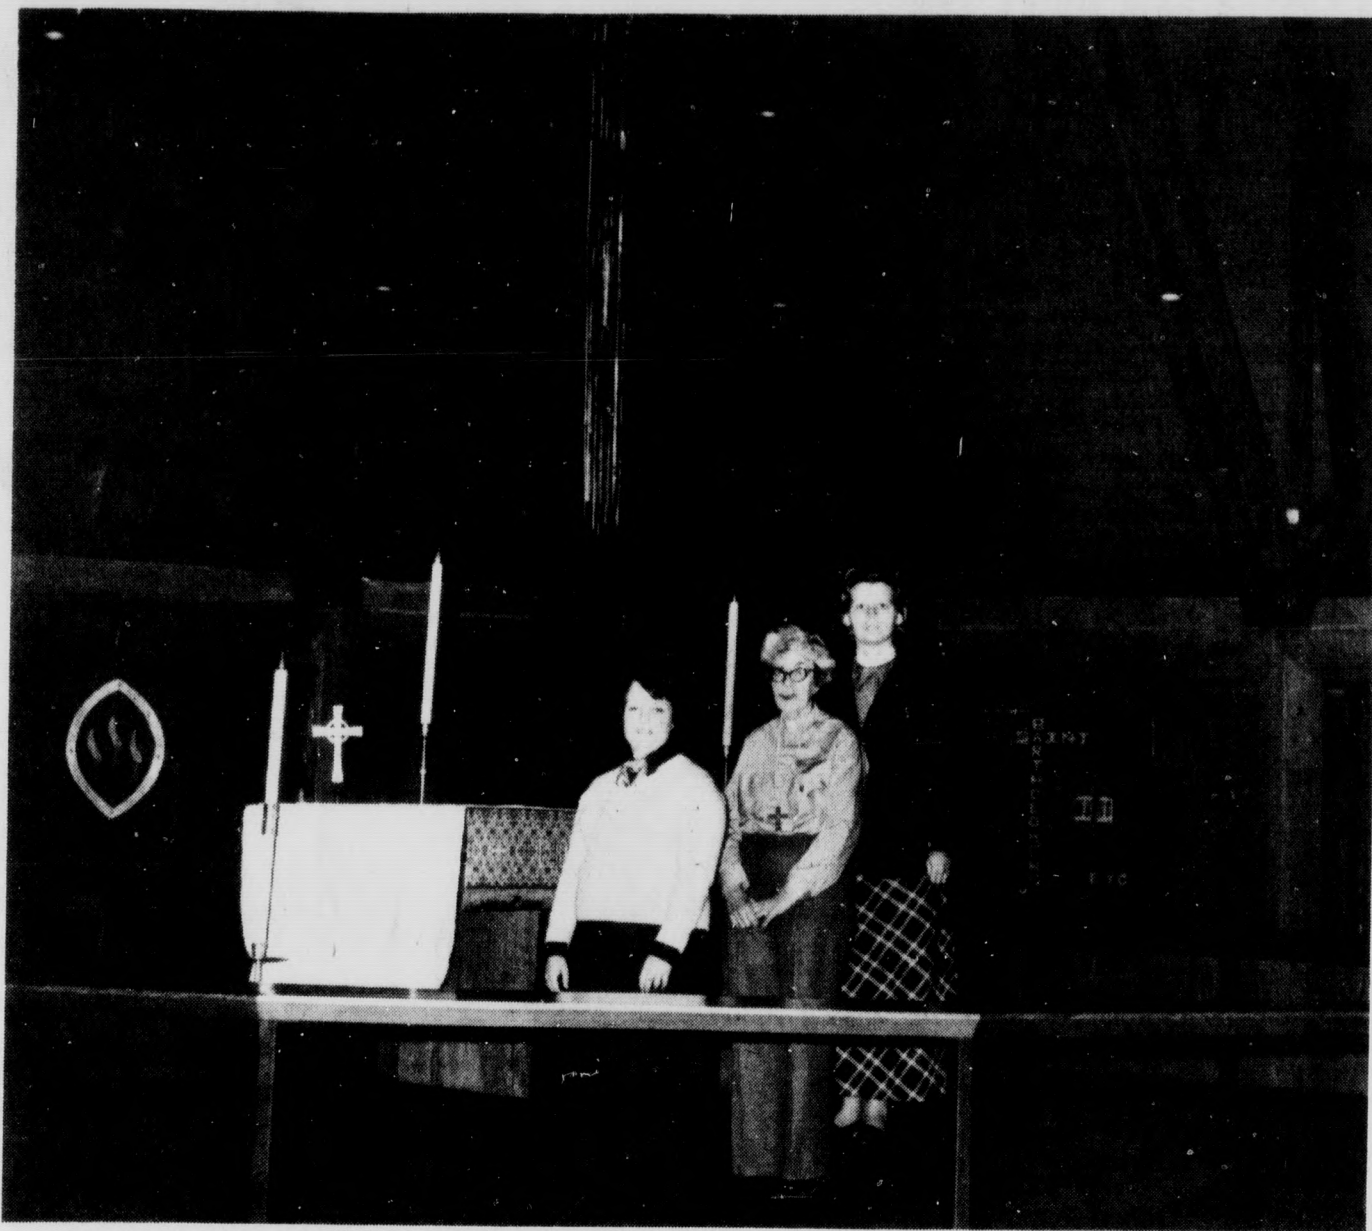

Although the Episcopal Church has progressed to the point of ordaining women "deacons," the Rev. Woods is still not considered a "priest." She is not allowed to consecrate the Mass, give absolution or a blessing. But it is the highest order allowed to a lay woman and is very symbolic of the emerging awareness that seeks more equal opportunity for women who want to serve their church.

Even the Roman Catholic Church, which also has the Holy Order of Priesthood, thus far will only ordain men as priests or deacons, but is allowing women to be lay ministers of communion and serve as lectors during the liturgy of the Mass. The National Coalition of Nuns is also making the push for the ordination for women and pressing for women's rights in their church.

Shirley Woods entered the ministry late. It was a decision finalized after she had served her country in the United States Army, worked as a physical therapist, married and raised four children. It was the culmination of a dream she had in her early twenties, but which wasn't possible for her, or most other women, until she was much older.

It was a calling she could no longer resist. With the support of her husband and family she started the study of the ministry while still a full time English and Latin teacher at Livermore High School.

Rev. Shirley Woods says she has never been sorry she pursued her dream. And at least one male member of her parish community says she is fully accepted because she is such a giving person and "really puts herself out." The Rev. Woods has continued her teaching profession at Livermore High adding to it two classes which she teaches at Chabot College in Philosophy and Humanities. She helps her pastor, the Rev. Kenneth Richards, preach the Sunday sermons and also helps with the church classes.

Seminarian Cindy Pleasant from John Knox Presbyterian Church in Dublin, the Rev. Shirley Woods, ordained Deacon of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church in Livermore and the Rev. Sue Bergmans, ordained Deacon of St. Clare's Episcopal of Pleasanton look forward to the day when women will be fully accepted ministers of all denominations.

The newest woman deacon to be ordained for the Episcopal Church is the Rev. Sue Bergmans of St. Clare's Episcopal Church in Pleasanton.

Sue, as she chooses to be called, is also entering the ministry late. Already a registered nurse with a bachelor of science degree from Holy Names College, she now holds the same degree of master of divinity that is required by all men who are ordained priests of the Episcopal Church.

She said the issue of women's ordination will be brought up at a national convention in September and she would welcome the chance to be her church's first fully accepted ordained priest.

Her straightforward warm manner has already earned for her respect and acceptance at St. Clare's. She helps as a pastoral counselor, teaches two bible study classes a week, helps with the sermons and still is on call as a nurse. She doesn't expect any immediate drastic changes in her church, but is grateful that she at last has been able to partially fulfill her spiritual ambitions.

Two other women in our valley already have a full pastorate within their churches and head their own congregations. Elizabeth (Betty) Burgle is an ordained minister of the Church of Divine Science. She had previously been a minister for the Unity Church for fifteen years. A widow with three married sons and proud grandmother of eight children, she exudes the good will her church's philosophy has been able to impart.

Church of Divine Science meets at the Franklin Savings and Loan Community Room every Sunday and "Betty" describes it as more of a study club or group therapy session that a regular church service. Its philosophy is based on control or "the power of positive thinking." Members study the basic rules of life and believe if you follow them you can't help but have a happy and healthy life.

"Everything is beautiful" to Betty Burgle and when she tells it with her full throated laughter, it makes one feel good just to listen to it.

The Rev. Margaret Zeise of the First Christian Church of Livermore says she is one of the few women in her church with a full pastorate. She worked there with a team ministry for 18 months and has been on her own since last July. She too came into her vocation late having worked for the city of Pacific Grove for eight years. When she first wanted to enter the seminary in 1964, the only options open to her were religious education or music.

She's now glad that she waited, because of the satisfaction derived from having her own church — something that wouldn't have been possible twelve years ago. She stuck to her resolution because, to Margaret, it was the only way of resolving her own personal identity crisis.

Influenced by the dedication of her father who was a cleric, she says her family has been very supportive of her ministerial efforts. She will continue her education and only lacks seven units to acquire her master of divinity degree. Margaret attends the Pacific School of Divinity two days a week, besides preparing Sunday sermons and is proudest of her achievements in group counseling.

The other three women representing the ministry in the valley are still in the preparatory stages. Closest to her goal is apple-cheeked, Cindy Pleasant, as pleasant-looking as her name.

Cindy is a seminarian at John Knox in Dublin preparing for her ordination as minister of the Presbyterian Church. Although only 24 years old, she has already attained her bachelor of arts in philosophy and a bachelor of science and a master of science in psychology. She entered college at the age of 15 and already had her sights set for the ministry. She will receive her degree in theology in June and will be all ready for her ordination.

Although the Presbyterian Church has been ordaining women since 1956, they still only have 156 to this date. But, she says she can sense the changes at her college in San Anselmo. When she started women represented only two percent of the seminarians. Now over one-third of those preparing for the ministry are women.

lifestyle

Sally Bystroff of Livermore is also a seminarian for the Presbyterian Church. A busy mother and community volunteer, she takes twelve units at San Anselmo all on one day of the week, from eight in the morning until ten at night. Next year she will be at her third level of preparation and close to her goal. She hopes to do her intern seminarian work at the Buenas Vidas Ranch for which she has worked so hard these last few years.

Cathy Sludder-Jordon is a seminarian in training under the guidance of her pastor husband, the Rev. Milton Sludder-Jordon, whom she met in college. But it wasn't until he was ordained a minister that she decided to join him in the ministry. She now has two years to go to complete her studies. Her husband will soon be transferred by his church and she hopes to complete her training at the Duke Divinity School in North Carolina.

Her husband has only been a minister for three years and is currently serving as assistant to Pastor Norman G. Callaway of the Asbury United Methodist Church. Cathy, also only 24 years old, feels as a minister herself she can best assist her husband in his work. They as yet have no children and she helps with the teaching of confirmation classes visitation of the sick and with the Valley Covenant Ministry that works with service projects throughout the valley.

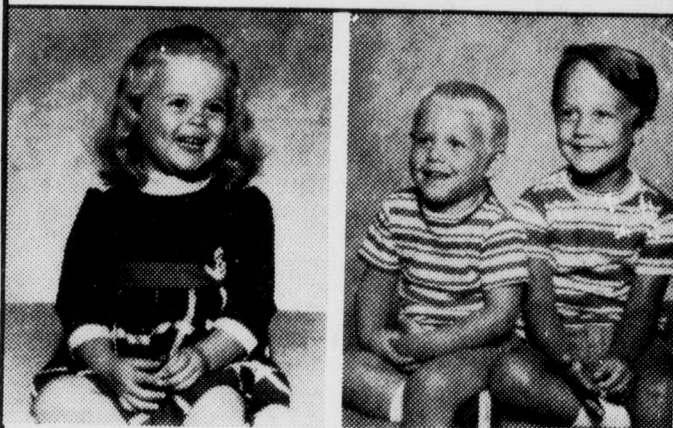

Interestingly enough all the women interviewed claimed the women in their congregations feel the most threatened by their presence. Women in the ministry is an institutional change and it demands a fundamental personal change.

And yet we can't keep asking them to wait until the time is "right" — they have already been waiting too long. For they truly believed St. Paul when he said: "Yes to me this grace was given to announce the Good News of the unfathomable riches of Christ and to enlighten all men as to what is the wonderful plan of God."

Pleasanton profile series begins with Frank Brandes

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of candidates' profiles about the city council race. Stories on other candidates will appear during the next couple of weeks.

PLEASANTON — City Council candidate Frank Brandes wants to have his own volunteer staff to help him do his homework.

He thinks such a staff is essential to give him an opinion independent of the information contained in the staff report. Too often staff reports contain only one point of view and that is not enough to make a good decision, said Brandes.

Asked if his own staff would shield him from broader community influences, Brandes responded, "No, I would try to get as much input as possible. I'm looking for expertise. I want men with budgeting experience to balance out the city staff's advice. But if there is an engineering problem, I would go to a man who earns his living in engineering. If the city is involved in some legal issues, I would go to someone with legal experience."

"I want opposite viewpoints. I know it works. I do that in my job," said Brandes. He also thinks that the city council does not take enough time to form decisions. Informational packets are received on Fridays and decisions made Monday nights.

Brandes would have at least a one week gap before making a decision.

Brandes does not like the city staff's proposal to create a local Department of Human Services. He does not deny there may be social needs locally, but he does not think local government should get involved with them.

"I know that speaking against it sounds like speaking against motherhood, but I'm not clear it should be a function of local government," said Brandes. He is concerned about the $50,000 a year estimate which one council member put on the price tag. It would be funded by the federal government at first, but after that it would be up to the city to take it over and that's the problem Brandes has with it.

Brandes said he has been a "strong advocate of building the Las Positas overpass" since he moved to the city four years ago. The issue is important enough to be put on the ballot and let the people decide whether they are willing to pay for it with a local bond issue, said Brandes.

Park development should go on the ballot for the same reason. "If enough people believe it should be built and it is important enough, it will be done," said Brandes. "I would rather have the voice of 5,000 or 10,000 people voting on it than five people (the council members)."

"The redevelopment agency should have gone to a ballot," said Brandes. "Ed Kinney (who voted for putting it on the ballot instead of killing the issue) was the most honest council member down there," said Brandes. "I think he was wrong in wanting redevelopment, but it should have gone to a vote. Two councilmen wanted to diminish redevelopment as an issue. That's my opinion, I don't know if for a fact."

A wide range of sizes for the LAVWA pipeline has been discussed, ranging from 11 to 15 mgd. Brandes favors a 13 mgd sizing.

"We are making decisions for the future. The desires of people in Pleasanton 20 years from now may be very different than the desires of those here now. It's unfortunate that sewage is determining the growth. We can't change that. But I favor 13 mgd on the LAVWA pipeline. People who yell for 11 mgd are die-hard no-growthers. No growth at all is stagnation."

Brandes disagrees with the two percent growth rate mandated by the Environmental Protection Agency to which the city council has acquiesced. "But I don't agree with 700 to 800 building starts a year, either," he said. "I've been accused of being a no-growth person."

The growth rate here should be one for the small city we have to handle capital expenditures and the revenues it produces. I would like to have growth decisions made here, not outside Pleasanton," said Brandes.

The candidate was asked his thoughts about the future of Dublin and Livermore in relation to Pleasanton. He thinks the most likely and desirable thing would be the merger of Pleasanton and Dublin into one city. Incorporation of Dublin is next on the list and the least advisable possibility is the incorporation of all three valley communities into one valley city.

Brandes feels that the proposed new town for the Las Positas Valley "should not exist." He said that "communities which have shown concern over the quality of life such as Pleasanton and Livermore should not have another factor thrown in to negate all the planning concern which the cities have shown."

"Pleasanton and Livermore could act very responsible in controlling growth and solving sewer and water problems. If you put in another element — 45,000 people — all the planning Livermore and Pleasanton does goes for naught," said Brandes.

Weissel labels 2 per cent growth 'ridiculous'

Editor's note: This is the second of a series of Livermore City council candidates' profiles. Others will appear before the election. LIVERMORE — Robert Weissel is all for more industry coming to town but believes the city's proposed low growth rate and high building fees structure must change before industry ever will want to locate in Livermore.

The proposed 2 per cent growth rate is "ridiculous," says Weissel. "Industry is not going to come our way and locate at this end of the valley when the population remains at the other end of the valley."

He thinks it wrong to set down any growth rate figures for Livermore and believes the city should be allowed to grow by supply and demand.

"If people want to live in Livermore, they should have the right," he states. "Our children should have the right to live in Livermore. We should give Livermore the right to grow and expand naturally, not by any set limits."

Weissel points an accusing finger at the city's building fees which have "jumped so fantastically over the last five years it's like slapping industry in the face."

He cites such figures as the city's sanitary sewer connection fee for residences which in 1970 was $283 and presently is $1,229.

"These and other things prove we're making it more costly to build in Livermore than I believe necessary. Labor costs the contractor enough. Supplies cost the contractor enough. Why does the city have to put these financial obstacles in the contractor's path as well," he wonders.

The solution as Weissel sees it is to amortize these fees over a period of years. "If these fees need to be as high as they are, which I rather doubt, maybe we could defer them over a period of five to 10 years," he suggests.

Weissel, an engineering technician with the city's Public Works Department under a federal funding program scheduled to end in June, has worked for Kaiser Industries and was a building contractor for three years. His business was in both the valley and Fremont.

He views his background as a city employee and building contractor as assets for the council.

"I've got the insight. I work on reports that go to the city council. Lots of times they don't have the expertise, knowledge or background to always come up with the right answer," he notes.

He also points to his expertise, technical background and experience in working with a large corporation, writing reports and management which he believes will enable him to approach and solve complex problems better than any of the other council candidates.

Weissel thinks the hiring of a community development director by the council is "one of the biggest mistakes they've made" because the manner in which the position is set up will bog him down with paper work and inter-office matters.

"There'll be hardly any time at all to bring development into Livermore, which is a very necessary and desirable thing. With enough industry our tax rate would subside substantially," he explains.

He would have preferred to see a full-time elected mayor who could represent the city in attracting industry to Livermore. (Weissel also would like to see another council member who, in addition to the mayor, would bring the number of seats on the council to seven.)

The candidate does not think the planned sewage treatment plant expansion of 1 million gallons per day is sufficient but has no other exact figure in mind. "We should be asking at least what Pleasanton is asking, if not more," is his answer.

He prefers not to take a position on the recreational vehicle referendum and supports the 25-cent tax override measure since it is on the ballot although he thinks a better way to expand the police and fire departments could have been found.

He has no answer for Livermore's transportation needs and believes the city should have a very important part in the development of Las Positas Valley.

"I think we should start talking with Mr. (Harlan) Geldermann instead of fighting," he suggests in reference to that developer's proposal for a New Town in the Las Positas Valley.

"We've been stonewalling it way too long," he adds. "We're trying to hide the issue and it's there. Let's get it out in the open and deal with it as adults and not like little children trying to hide it under our bed."

"I think we could begin by sitting down with Geldermann and discussing the problems in an intelligent manner."

Weissel lives with his wife Paula and their infant daughter Nicole in Liver-more. He has been a Livermore resident for the past three years and before that lived in Sunol for seven years.

He has held his job with the city under federal funding for one and a half years and was selected from 17 applicants for the position.

If Weissel is elected and the city attorney rules his job constitutes a conflict of interest, Weissel promises to leave his city position. If there is no conflict of interest found by the city attorney, he will remain.

Weissel's immediate supervisor, Rick Dondro, is his campaign manager and he has received "a lot of encouragement" from his colleagues on the city staff in his race for the council.

Researcher calls EBRPD 'enlightened'

The East Bay Regional Park District, which serves Contra Costa and Alameda Counties with 29 parks, has been paid an unusual compliment.

A Scottish university researcher is seeking affiliation with EBRPD, which he calls "one of the most enlightened and best developed recreation systems in the world."

He says his description is based upon first-hand observation last year when he was working for his master's degree at the University of California on a Rotary Foundation fellowship.

Robin S. Henshaw of Edinburgh, Scotland, says he would like to obtain two or three years' experience in the recreation management field with EBRPD.

He says he has done "a lot of work on the geography of American recreation, including some specifically on the East Bay situation."

Currently he is researching recreational land use with special emphasis on footpath development and use at the University of Edinburgh.

Guatemala City is tragic site following quake

Death and destruction dominated the scenes in and about Guatemala City following Wednesday's big earthquake and heavy aftershocks Friday. A bridge at Aguas Calientes outside

Guatemala City, left, was destroyed and, along with landslides, hampered access to the stricken areas. A young boy and his

Foreign experts fear epidemics in Guatemala

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — Foreign disaster experts expressed fears Saturday that mass starvation and serious epidemics will envelop Guatemala in the aftermath of earthquakes that have killed at least 7,375 people by official count.

Ruined roads, broken bridges, landslides and fuel shortages blocked delivery of food into devastated areas outside Guatemala City and hundreds of aftershocks still rolled through the Central American country of 6 million persons.

Messengers rode mules and bicycles into the capital with tales of whole communities leveled by the shaking earth, adding to the ever mounting death toll.

The emergency relief committee said at least 7,375 persons had died since the first earthquake before dawn Wednesday. Unofficial estimates from foreign rescue workers put the toll as high as 14,000.

The U.S. Embassy said an American Mormon missionary working outside the capital had been seriously injured, the first reported casualty among the some 5,000 Americans living or traveling here. The missionary, who was not identified, was evacuated to the United States, the embassy said.

From 5 a.m. Friday until 5 a.m. Saturday the national observatory recorded 133 new tremors, which kept the devastated country in turmoil.

Health experts expressed fear that epidemics could cause more deaths because many dead were being buried in shallow graves, people were drinking untreated water and no sanitary facilities exist for thousands living in makeshift shelters in city streets.

More than 400 people, experts said, were buried in a common grave less than four feet deep near Chimaltenango. A radio station said survivors north of Guatemala City were begging for guns in order to shoot dogs digging up shallow graves.

Fearing widespread epidemics, President Kjell Eugenio Laugerud on Friday night ordered mass vaccinations and the immediate burial of the dead in common graves.

Relief aid continued to pour into Guatemala City, but blocked transportation routes kept it from being distributed to provincial areas with the greatest need.

A U.S. Army field hospital arrived in the capital Thursday, but it took almost 24 hours to move the hospital 38 miles to its destination at Chimaltenango.

Disaster teams from the United States, Mexico and Venezuela were trying to get food and medical facilities into the ravaged areas.

These experts said the Guatemalan earthquakes will probably prove to be worse than the 1973 earthquake that destroyed Managua, Nicaragua, and left 10,000 people dead.

'Ghosts' of Patty provide testimony

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The ghosts of Patricia Hearst's underground life — a brigade of dead terrorists and their compatriot "Tania" — have emerged as the star witnesses of her bank robbery trial.

Their words are spoken mostly by others. Their faces are seen only on film.

But lawyers for both sides have made it clear that these resurrected revolutionaries, dead or alive, hold the keys to Miss Hearst's fate.

Not least among her adversaries is Tania, the alter-ego whose electronically recorded words and deeds brought Miss Hearst to the courtroom where she now stands trial on federal bank robbery charges.

It was in the guise of Tania, bewigged and armed with a sawed off carbine that she helped rob the Hibernia Bank on April 15, 1974, little more than 60 days after she was dragged kicking and screaming from her Berkeley apartment by members of the fanatical Symbionese Liberation Army.

Miss Hearst, daughter of San Francisco newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst, later used the name Tania in tape recordings in which she denounced her family and her former life and said she had joined her SLA captors.

In the first week of testimony, the seven men and five women of her jury were given tantalizing clues to the case which lies ahead. They heard two opening statements and saw the first of the government's witnesses in the celebrated trial which could last through the month.

The prosecution's case, outlined by U.S. Attorney James L. Browning Jr., rests on the presumption that "Tania" was born free a creature of conversion perhaps, but always an enthusiastic trooper in the SLA.

The defense team, headed by F. Lee Bailey, will seek not only to bury Tania once and for all but to prove that she never existed. To emphasize the point, Bailey did not mention the name Tania even once in his opening statement.

Instead, jurors heard him speak other names — Donald "Cinque" DeFreeze, Camilla Hall, Angela Atwood — dead SLA soldiers who, in effect, will be prosecuted by the defense.

"Patricia Hearst," Bailey told jurors, "... was a completely apolitical creature. She had no interest in radical politics, causes or anything of the like, did not attend meetings or get involved in projects of this sort."

New words to an old refrain

"Balanced growth."
It's a promise from out of the past. The pitch made by candidates, the pledge of planning consultants, the dream of every citizen who saw his community as being somehow "a big improvement over that place I just left."

Here we had room for industry — spread generously along Livermore's eastern borders, occupying an inviting northern-third of Pleasanton's urban sphere. Even Camp Parks was being boomed as the "industrial base for a new city of Dublin-San Ramon."

There was to be "balance" also in healthy expansion of the Valley's retail commerce, in bold recreational offerings and a handsome college campus to call our own.

And then all that was lost, or at least reduced to a murmur. The economic crunch and pollution woes that halted the boom in new homes, just as surely discouraged investment in new commerce, and culture.

But now the candidates for office at either end of the Valley are offering us a new brew, from an old recipe.

If we were to venture a "poll" of the 15 active candidates for council in Livermore and Pleasanton, we would have to guess that "no growth" is pretty much a dead issue. "SAVE" is not the battle cry, not this time around.

The campaign promise — at least in interviews with this newspaper's staff — leans heavily on "more industry and commerce" ... "broadening our tax base so that we can expand the city's services." There are even one or two to assure us, if they are elected, of "reasonable growth limits."

The old dream died in a flood of homes and a backlash of anti-development that halted all growth, discouraged all investment in this basin, and left us wondering what kind of half-monster we had created — all body and no head.

In 1976 the candidates seem to recognize that. They talk of "taking meaningful steps" and "getting our priorities in order." And they pledge to make "balanced growth" an acceptable goal once again.

It all adds up to an interesting election for March of 1976, and a fascinating peek at what the future might bring ... for the Valley that still dares to dream.

Judicial exemption to the ballot box

The February edition of the Livermore-Amador Valley Bar Association's news letter reminds its members of Justice Frankfurter's historic admonition to the judiciary:

"Judges as persons, or courts as institutions, are entitled to no greater immunity from criticism than other persons or institutions. Just because the holders of judicial office are identified with the interests of justice, they may forget their common human frailties and fallibilities."

We wonder how Justice Frankfurter would respond to that current practice which exempts all judges, even at the Municipal Court level, from those election standards and requirements which must otherwise apply to all other public servants.

The Times joins with those Valley residents who commend Mark Eaton in his appointment to the Livermore-Pleasanton Municipal Court. And we agree with Governor Brown's choice of "the best man available" for that post.

It would have been nice had the Valley's electorate been allowed to join in that decision. Eaton's formal election in this June's scheduled ballot would have added popular endorsement to what is being hailed as a sound judicial, and even political, appointment.

But there will be no ballot this year on Mark Eaton's judicial servitude, nor on Judge John Lewis' bid for a second term. No election until 1978, and not even then — not as long as Judges Eaton and Lewis choose to remain in office, and the legal brotherhood agrees to keep "hands off" those two incumbents.

It seems that the rules governing election of judges are not the rules which apply to balloting for every other elective post. In an enlightened move the state legislators recently required that an appointee to the board of supervisors, the local school board etc. can only hold that post until the next available election date. Several other moves have been made to limit the advantage held by an incumbent, and to thereby give the challenger a better opportunity at that post.

Such changes, it is argued, best serve the people and the democratic process.

But not the election of a municipal court judge; and not the peoples' right to affirm an appointment to that office.

The county counsel has ruled that judges are exempt from those limitations which apply to other elective posts. That such exemption should be enjoyed by those charged with upholding and interpreting the law is particularly sad.

That privilege should be removed, and the sooner the better.

Cutting us up

Declaring the people of California live in a state too big for their own good, the dean of the California Legislature, Senator Randolph Collier, unveiled a plan to divide the state into three. Collier, who has served in the Senate longer than any person in history, is completing his 38th year and will run for yet another term this fall. Stating his idea was "neither whimsical nor capricious," he said "The benefits for the people would be overwhelming."

Demands for division have been a recurrence since the state was formed. In recent years numerous proposals for some kind of split have been introduced, including one by Collier several years ago. And, sporadic citizen uprisings for separation have occurred also, one only last year.

"But mostly these have been angry reactions of northerners to Los Angeles excesses," Collier explained, and they have been laughed off. But their grievances were valid. The southerners stole our water and our highway money and so dominate our legislature that it is near impossible for northern counties to get consideration."

Although Collier, who fathered the state's freeway system and has ruled over the Senate Transportation Committee most of his career, is irked over the southland getting the lion's share of road funds, especially now when construction money for the north is exhausted, he said his move is not prompted by provincialism.

"It's true that a few southern counties with less than one third the total highway miles get near two-thirds of the money, but the logic for dividing the state transcends such matters. And, the fact is that many southerners favor the idea. They have come to realize there are many disadvantages to bigness. Even now efforts are afoot to divide Los Angeles County into at least three."

"The impelling reasons are that the people of California are being hornswoggled by the federal government because they do not have the representation to which they are entitled," he contended.

"If you look at the map of the Atlantic seaboard you will see it takes eleven states to equal the California coastline.

We have more square miles than all of them put together and it would take the population of ten of them to equal us. You could lose at least two of them in L.A. County alone. If you believe the Supreme Court's 'one, man-one-vote' rule is right it makes no sense that such an area should have ten times the voting power in the U.S. Senate."

"Also consider that it would take the combined population of the 22 smallest states to equal ours. And we have a population greater than all of the states west of the Missouri put together, excluding Texas. We have more people than nearly half the states totalled and more than half the continental U.S. omitting Texas yet we have only two votes in the Senate." (Collier's own state senate district covers more square miles than any of 13 states and has as many people as the entire state of Nevada.)

To those who scoff at the idea Collier points out there is nothing new about splitting states. "Where do you think all the little states came from? Some are splittings of Massachusetts, Virginia, Carolina and Georgia."

His plan is to divide California on a straight line running through the Tehachapi Mountains. It would be just above Santa Barbara between the 34th and 35th parallels and split Santa Barbara, Kern and Inyo counties. "There is nothing sacred about county lines," he snapped, "they have been changed many times."

Out of the division he would form a third state composed of San Diego, Riverside and Imperial counties. "Those three have more area than nine other states and a population greater than any of 19 states."

While his plan would not nearly give the present California the equal representation to which it would be entitled by his comparisons, it would add four more U.S. Senators as three states and provide a greater return of federal funds to the area.

"And that's what it is all about, sonny," said the elder statesman, conceding that his immediate attention will be given to his campaign for reelection. "After that I am going to dedicate myself to bringing the plan into reality."

Letter to the Times

YMCA Week

Editor, The Times:
(Attention Reina Whitney)
On behalf of the youth of our valley, I would like to thank you for the picture and fine article that you wrote regarding YMCA Week and our "Y" programs.

It is very heartening to receive such splendid cooperation from the press in such an articulate and interesting article.

Richard G. Babington
Executive Director
Twin Valley YMCA

"We can give you 24 pages at 50 percent," he told me. "Do you think you can handle it?" Fifty percent of 24 pages is an 1,800 inch news hole.

Ten minutes earlier I had told Fenwick Addison Truebridge I wanted to leave a trifle early Friday.

"Can you take over for me?" I inquired.

True is a good fellow. He agreed to do the job.

Next came Perraga with his kind offer. I had been yelling for more space. A fellow doesn't look a gift horse in the mouth just because he is giving a surprise party.

"I can handle it," I told him.

"It was like asking for a drink and having the hose turned on you, as my father used to say," Skeeter remarked later. Her father was from Texas and full of sage observations.

Somehow I cleaned house, put together all except two of those 24 pages, picked up the submarines, the birthday gift from Warren Wade's fine establishment, the birthday cake and the wheat squeezings. Remembered I had forgotten the roses and made a special trip to uptown Dublin for them.

Believe me, a man giving a surprise party can be busy.

The kids took over while I went to pick the lady up at the Carruths. Told her I had forgotten my pocketbook and could we stop by the house to get it. The lady was furious. But we did get her in the darkened house and she WAS surprised.

I was busy. Don't ask me how the submarines were. They must have been good because they didn't last long enough for me to have a bite.

It was a tired old man who went to Denny's for a snack at 2 a.m.

"Will you have biscuits or toast with your breakfast?" the young waitress asked.

"That'll be fine," I replied. And promptly went to sleep.

round the town

(A personal note to all of you who joined in my Wednesday admonition to "Think storm!" I wish to disclaim the allegation of that caller who, in the midst of Thursday's great snow storm, accused me of "spreading your damned Canadian winter all over our lovely Bay Area." It is not my fault if you latter-day thinkers all have cold minds. My own thoughts were confined to a nice warm rain, preferably of the Tahitian variety, with grass-skirted girls and that sort of thing.)

I may soon be leaving you Freed of this column and the those other daily newspaper chores.

Am expecting a very handsome offer, in the very near future, from the book publishers. Then Hollywood. The usual big-money channels.

It all comes about because of this brilliant idea I got for a hot-selling story. The title alone is enough to frighten hell out of America, a sure-fire route to financial success, of course ...

"TEETH!!" How does THAT grab you? Can see it now ... spread along the paperback stands in airports across the land ... dancing on theater marquees in 50 states, and Puerto Rico.

The idea came to me after passing through Doctor Ralph's waiting room, on my way to an unexpected session with my family dentist.

"Think I've busted every tooth in my head, Doc," I informed him. "Hurts like hell."

It was, I dutifully informed my dentist, the fault of the lady at our house.

"She got these blessed cookies that were wafer thin, but tough as steel. Three bites, followed by a swallow of cold milk, and I felt like somebody was ripping out the nerve system in my head, with a dull knife."

Doctor Ralph agreed that women are known to purchase dangerous cookies, and other assorted threats to man's well-being.

"You've cracked the cap on this one molar and that's for sure," he announced, peering menacingly into my depths. "Probably aggravated the nerves across your entire jaw. Bet it hurts," he added, prodding me with his blessed tool.

"Gurtslikell," I replied, giving him my blackest stare.

"Looks like we may have something over here, too," he announced, jabbing a nerve on the other side.

"Cantuknockitoff?" I asked, but to no avail, of course. Dentists only like to hear from their patients at intervals spaced to assure that the heart is still beating, pulse reasonably steady. Other than that, patient might as well be a deaf mute.

"I'll need two flimflams of salibash and a hydrome of toxic tarantula," Doc informed his assistant, or so it sounded to me.

Frankly, I was fast losing interest in the whole blessed business. Even the cute little nurse took on the appearance of Dracula's lab technician as she arrived with this-n-that potion, a new double-headed axe, or another brace of bits for his jackhammer.

"How are things with the family?" Doc asks, pleasantly, while immediately stuffing my mouth with two pounds of wax, a large roll of cotton batten, and a clamp that effectively separated my lower jaw from the rest of my head. By about six inches.

"Myfamwysfineandandy," I replied, but I knew he didn't really care. He was in a world of his own. Paul Muni discovering the secret of curdled milk. Lugosi going for the jugular.

He had, of course, filled my jaw with pain killer. It's the dental code of humanity. Unfortunately, he knocked out just the left side. Right side still hurt like the devil. Mygawd! Was he drilling on the wrong side??

"Did you say something?" he asked, pleasantly. "Mawrightjawurtssomethinfierce," I replied, as well as a man can with a mouthful of fingers. But of course he ignored me, and drilled on.

It was then — while the jackhammer pounded away and the assistant kept bringing in more and larger bits — that I got this great idea. A paperback about dentistry! The helpless victim strapped in the chair. The doctor who turns out to be an Olympic Games reject, looking for ways to get even with humanity.

I was wondering whether to use Phyllis Diller or Marie Dressler in the part of the doctor's assistant, when all of a sudden the jack-hammering ceased.

"There," Doctor Ralph said, proudly. "Come back in a week and we'll finish putting the cap on that tooth. And give my regards to your wife."

And that was it. Ushered out the door before I could get him to sign waivers, giving me license to star him as the Dante of the dentist's chair. Ah well, if not "Teeth!" then perhaps I'll just wait until his bill comes, and then write a thriller entitled "Ouch!" That's one shocker every American will understand.

Lighter Times

Readers of the novel and viewers of the play and movie "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" will recall that the Bull Goose Looney in the work heads the committee of mental patients whom McMurphy addresses as "loonies." The name "Bull Goose Looney" is a charming one and I think it should be made an elective office rivaling governor of the state if not President of the USA. My campaign platform for the office follows.

1. Milk and cookies before retiring makes for a strong, calm national mood.

2. Abolition of all taxes.

3. Abolition of all salaries (see No. 2 above).

4. Abolition of all vehicles. This will solve the smog problem and the school busing controversy. It should have other desirable effects on the body politic, for example, weight loss from walking.

5. A one dollar limit on political contributions. This will tell candidates how many people really love them for themselves.

Beneficial effects should follow.

6. An immediate reduction in everything. Things were better in 1940.

7. The immediate elevation to sainthood of everyone who wants it. This will save much fervor and guilt on the part of many citizens, especially politicians. I also favor the granting of bachelor's degrees at birth for the same reason.

8. The adoption of sister trees by individuals. If it can work for sister cities, it can work for saving trees.

9. Institution of the two day work week with one day to warm up and the other to taper off.

10. Abolition of matrimony, which in one stroke would eliminate in-laws.

I know these are merely modest proposals, but you fellow loonies out there give me time and we'll have this insane asylum humming in no time. We might even run it better than the, uh, professionals.

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

A pair of Italian Submarines were sunk in San Ramon Friday night.

There were no casualties, thank you. The crew was not aboard.

Matter of fact the crew took the submarines aboard, if you will forgive something like a misplaced metaphor.

The subs were only five feet long and carrying a cargo of cold meats, cheese and Italian salad topped with an olive oil dressing.

They were escorting ten pounds of potato salad, a couple of gallons of wheat squeezings, juniper juice and elixir of potato.

The cargo went down with the escort. It all hit bottom down to the last crumb. All that was left were a few pieces of birthday cake floating on a bright green table cloth.

That is the usual fate of Italian Submarines, I am told. They never make it to port.

All of which doesn't mean very much except that party giving folks are missing a good bet if they let the home port of those Italian Submarines sink.

I can't think of an easier or more economical way to feed thirty or forty people at a birthday party. Frank Penna's deal where Dilaura's old restaurant was located in Pleasanton is the best I have bumped into and I say that with all sincerity.

Don't get the wrong idea, folks. I paid for the sandwiches, salad and cakes.

I am just deeply grateful that Frank was around to take care of an important item.

Probably it is easy enough for a family to give a party when the wife is around to either cook or order the hors d'oeuvres.

For a man alone it is not that simple. And he cannot very well hold a surprise party for the lady of the house and ask her to do the cooking.

Which is where Penna came in. He did the cooking. The crew did the eating.

Of course I had help. An old male chauvinist pig of my standing is not up to getting together a guest list for the lady. Mary Carruth, the energetic Murray school librarian, and Sue Pierce, who is better known for her work with the Roadrunners who support the Mt. Diablo Therapy Center, took care of that considerable detail.

All four Poole kids, Pat, Mike, John and Anne pitched in.

But the burden fell on the man in this corner, the fellow who had the idea in the first place.

Believe me, it was a burden.

Some degree of plotting with the ubiquitous Mrs. Carruth was required. Getting Skeeter out of the house and keeping her there is no mean trick, but we managed.

Cleaning the house was the next item of importance. This old man is not exactly experienced as a skultery maid.

Friday morning I wielded a mean vacuum cleaner. Washed a nifty dish. Pushed furniture around and picked up the scatter rugs. Folks at a party can stumble on loose carpetry.

Somewhere between then and five p.m. it was necessary to get out one of the larger newspapers we have published in some time.

Thursday afternoon Dick Perraga, the Times new advertising director, came to me with the good news.

Bicentennial blizzard beautifies the valley

The Dublin Canyon Pass took on the aura of the high Sierras as the valley's belated winter made up for lost time.

"Rodriguez," his voice boomed across the clatter of my overwrought typewriter, "what are you doing?"

I skipped the obvious sarcasm.

"Do you have a warm coat? Doesn't matter. Grab a camera and get some snow pictures before it rains. We'll lose this in a minute if the sky opens."

Editors. Harumph! "Isn't it beautiful out there?" he asked rhetorically.

Especially if you're inside, I thought, not warming to the idea of trudging through this valley blizzard with camera, light meter, flash, extra film, notebook, pencil, bulky coat and gloves.

Tried pawing the assignment off on Peter, but he'd have no part of it. Already taken off his shoes to warm his feet. An old trick. Wonder where the little devil learned it?

So to Livermore and the seven-foot snowman.

The gloves came off first. Somewhere on Fourth Street at an impromptu stop to shoot a neighborhood production.

The Bookers, Adkins, Gonzaleses, Douwsmas, Gilmores and McLaughlins were nice. They apologized for their soiled snowman, posed for pictures, dutifully corrected my spelling of their names — and offered no coffee.

The life of a reporter, I thought, while freezing in the brunt of a storm whipped off the Nevada desert to end abruptly this frightening drought.

And to think I was barbecuing hamburgers just last Sunday and marveling at my camellias in their full, pink bloom.

***

The seven-foot snowman

didn't quite measure up to his advertisements.

Chuck Bledsoe, Ken Turner and Larry Leingang topped him off at five-foot-ten when their hands started turning blue.

Mine, sans gloves, were running a good race, too.

"Fred" was his name. He was leading his favorite pet, the well frozen "Spacepup."

One more shot, I thought, then I'll get my $65 shoes out of this four-bit snow. My wife will KILL me if I ruin these shoes. I'll help her, too.

A four-foot snowWOMAN accosted me before I could reach the near warmth of my car.

Hecox will love it, I thought, oozing with perversity. Turn me loose with a camera again, will ya!

*** You have to understand my car. The heater went out last winter. Only on the passenger side, but it took the defroster with it.

Down with the window, back on with the gloves. Get these maps out of the way, gently set the camera on the floor, check with my list of volunteered snowpersons and to Dublin we go.

Must be a valley-wide story, you know. Editors... harumph!

Say, I know this great little pub in Dublin. Got an in with the manager, too. Taught the little devil to tend bar. No... that's the first thing Hecox will check: my breath.

Off with the gloves, on with the camera, light meter, note book and pencil — to hell with the flash. If these people don't know that's snow falling, THEY must have spent the day in the pub.

***

I'm in love with Samoyeds. My wife knows it, too. I've a tendency to go gooey inside when I see one, and "Frosty" brought out the worst in me.

Formerly snow white, her massive, yuck-colored hair was a declaration of her love for snow.

Steve and Jeff Tucker tried to rekindle her Siberian instincts by hitching her to their sleigh. Small sleigh, smallish dog.

You'd think by now I'd learn not to call out romantically to yuck-colored Sams. She dutifully responded, leaping up on me to show her mutual love.

So much for the pants and coat.

*** I should have known better than to drive down Foothill Road. Too many kids, too much snow and a gorgeous, enormous hill.

Off with the gloves, up the window, on camera, on meter, etc., etc.

Now, if I walk through this snow... oops, slush... delicately, maybe I'll spare these Rockefeller shoes.

No such luck. The cold crept in like fog off the frosty North Atlantic. What am I talking about? I've never been in, on or near the North Atlantic.

Too late. If the socks are wet, the leather is wetter. Tonight it will be a fireplace, hot soup and shoe polish. They'll turn white, I know it. Like those combat boots I used to protect your freedom in the frozen Klamath basin.

*** That's not the 4 o'clock news, silly, it's 5 o'clock. Hecox will kill me. Check more than my breath, too.

"Rodriguez," the boom again, "where the hell

Snow shrouded limbs framed frosty "Fred," the allegedly seven-foot snowman.

"Frosty" gazed longingly at snowbanks in his past when Jeff Tucker of Dublin "hitched" her up to his sleigh. The U.S. Weather Service predicts clearing skies for most of Northern California for the weekend after the sharp storm punched through the top half of the state, carrying snow down to sea level. A deep low pressure system responsible for the freak storm was expected to drift south, causing clearing skies to the north. A warming trend was expected in the Sierras, after the area received snow the last two days.

Voice of the past

Mike Zampa

Sports broadcasting lost a pioneer outpost two years ago when KYTE Stereo signed off the F.M. dial for the last time. True, the Livermore station wasn't a 50,000 watt clear channel giant. But it was one of the few courageous enough to tackle sport's toughest announcing chore, high school football and basketball.

Friday nights during autumn and winter were traditions for KYTE and the EBAL.

Broadcasting from the roof of the Livermore High School press box, with transformer high atop Sig Henne's Men's Store, or some other equally lofty Livermore landmark, KYTE transmitted live play-by-play into the homes of Dublin, Pleasanton and Livermore listeners. It would have broadened its audience, but to be within distance of KYTE's voice, you almost had to be sitting next to the announcer.

Bob Desmond, a veteran of small town radio, handled the play-by-play chores. His sidekick was a squeaky voiced man whose name has escaped history.

Together they produced some memorable moments in the field of broadcast journalism.

Desmond was KYTE Stereo's utility man. He served as morning and afternoon disc jockey, sports director and newsmen. He was also the guy to see when the rest room ran out of toilet paper.

It was Desmond at the mike three years ago when Livermore High played San Ramon for the EBAL championship in a merciless downpour. He broadcast the entire game in a prone position, stretched flat over the electronic gadgetry that was funneling his voice out across the valley. Desmond feared that the wrong tube would be inundated and that KYTE and its top jock would be short-circuited.

He made up the names of players as the contest progressed, because spotting was an infant profession those days in Livermore, and mud had obliterated the jersey numbers.

Doing commercials was like trying to read oatmeal thanks to the rain, so Desmond ad-libbed.

He made an unforgettable picture after the game, tucked in a dark recess of the gymnasium, clutching a bottle of liquid warmth and looking like the sorry survivor of a Channel swim.

It was also Desmond who conducted one of the famous interviews in the annals of EBAL sports.

At halftime one evening he featured a colorful Livermore sportswriter, and launched into a discourse on the first two quarters of play.

Desmond: "What did you think of the first half?"

Writer: "They really got their a..es beaten off, didn't they?"

Lots of dead air:

Writer: "Did I say something wrong?"

End of interview.

Those brave broadcasts from the EBAL frontier were silenced the day KYTE was melted down and sent to the great waxworks in the sky. KKIQ replaced it, and has dwelled at 101.7 on your F.M. dial ever since.

KYTE had featured music just left of KABL and KBAY, the stations that make you want to read a magazine in uncomfortable furniture and have your teeth cleaned.

KKIQ turned to the youngsters with formula rock-n-roll radio. But ironically, it discarded high school sports, though prep-aged listeners formed the basis of its listening audience.

Just this season KKIQ joined a network that is airing U.S.F. basketball live. But station manager Jerry Havel says there are no plans to go back to the high schools.

"There's no money in it," he says bluntly. "You just can't take away three hours of your radio time for high school football."

According to Havel's figures, the listening market within KKIQ's reach covers 125,000 people. Only 5,000 at most would be interested in a high school sports contest, he says, and of those, most would be in attendance at the game. That would leave pitifully few to tune in his broadcast.

"Our Friday audience is out of this world," Havel says. "But if we turn it over to high school football, the kids would tune us out and turn to KFRC. We'd lose and we have no idea how many people we'd get back with the broadcasts."

Another drawback, Havel says, would be finding a play-by-play man able to cope with the hardships Desmond faced. "Our disc jockeys sound pretty professional now," he claims, "and I'm not going to turn it over to some guy who's going to make an ass of himself. If you don't have a good man doing sports, it sounds like hell."

Broadcast of USF basketball has worked out well so far, Havel claims. KKIQ purchased broadcast rights from USF's home-owned network, and sold air time to eager sponsors at a good price.

Havel went for the package because it was a chance to get in on the ground floor of a prestigious commodity. With its freshman-laden team, USF figures to hold national prominence for the next four years. KKIQ will hold an option to broadcast each season.

Though advertisers snapped up commercial minutes for the Dons' broadcasts, Havel says there's no indication they'd jump at a rekindled prep package. If his reckoning is correct, it wouldn't sell. The listening market just isn't there.

And alas, the opportunity isn't there for a pioneering broadcaster to make radio out of intolerable circumstances.

Defense has been an important part of the Livermore High School basketball team's success this season and at no time was this more apparent than Friday night when the Cowboys defeated visiting Monte Vista 56-49.

Holding a slim 37-36 lead entering the final quarter the Cowboys ran off eight straight points while holding the Mustangs to none in the first three minutes of the period.

Tight defense by ace guard Ted Wood, and center Curt Groth prevented the Mustangs from going inside. Groth had six of his game high 25 points in the final quarter.

With a minute and a half left in the contest Monte Vista made a belated run at the Cowboys, closing to within three points, 50-47, with 56 seconds left in the game, but Wood sank four free throws and forward Mark McCreary made a jump shot to cinch the victory for Livermore.

It was a close contest all the way, with the Cowboys' largest margin at 45-36 with 5:28 left.

Monte Vista grabbed Livermore jumped off to a 5-0 first quarter lead before center Lance Blanshei hit a jumper for Monte Vista. The Mustangs pulled to a 10-9 first quarter advantage as Blanshei and guard Kevin Jones hurt the Cowboys with their outside shooting.

Monte Vista held the same one-point margin at the halftime break, 24-23, as Wood, a returning All-EBAL guard from last season, only scored six points in the first two periods.

Wood starting hitting in the third period, however, and the Cowboys began to move. He canned six points in the period as the Cowboys took a one-point advantage into the final period.

Wood ended the contest with 18 points, on seven field goals and four free throws. The senior guard also penetrated well and had seven rebounds.

Groth, a 6-4 pivotman, pulled off 12 rebounds and clocked five shots against the smaller Mustangs. Blanshei led the Mustangs with 13 points. High scoring guard Ron Low was held to seven markers.

Livermore coach John Jones admitted his team might have been a little tired from their frustrating loss to league-leading Amador Wednesday night but praised the work of his defense in the last quarter.

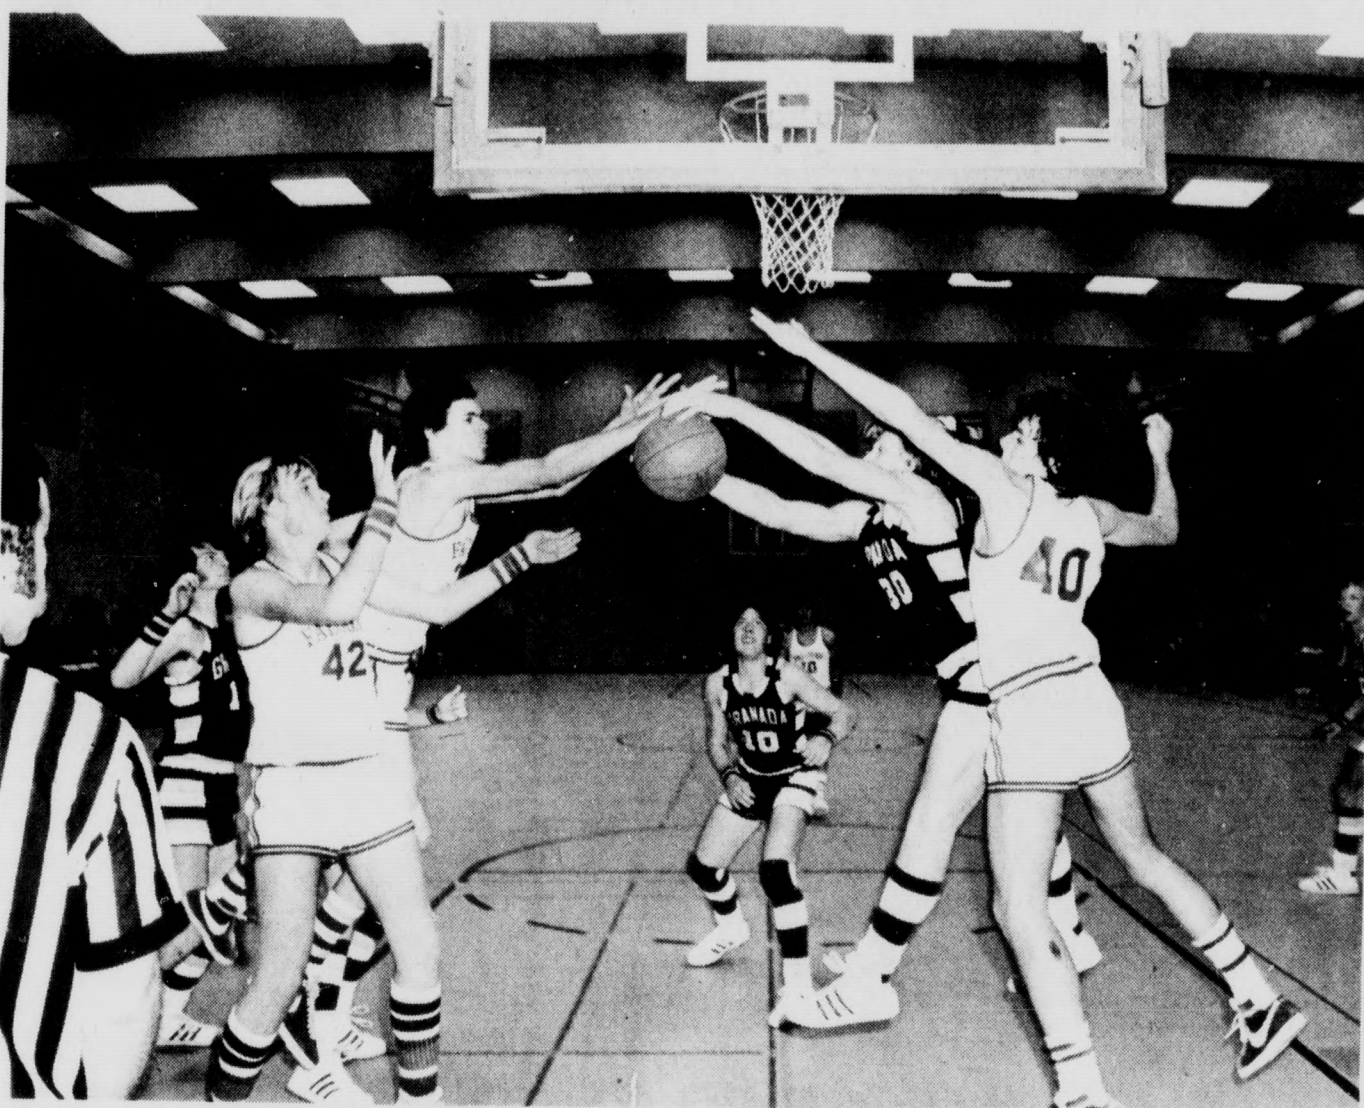

Jones also praised the work of Wood.

"Wood penetrates well and this helps a player like Groth," he said. "Groth scored well tonight and was really strong on the boards."

Dublin pair stand out as San Ramon falls

Wanted: for crossing a free throw line while in possession of a stolen basketball — Kory Porter and his accomplice in the Dublin High backcourt, Ed LaPerle.

During the first half of Friday night's East Bay Athletic League game with San Ramon High, Porter and LaPerle conspired to rob the Wolves of the ball seven times. Their Gael cohorts swiftly turned the thefts into 14 points, the margin of victory, 72-58.

The Dublin press hounded San Ramon all over the Danville court in the first half and the Wolves turned the ball over 15 times for nine Gael buckets, five on Porter's larceny, two on that of LaPerle.

Dublin, meanwhile, gave the ball away just five times.

While the antics of Turnovers, Inc., was making life miserable for the Lobos, other Gaels were perpetuating their own specialties.

Cliff Johnson scored 27 points, almost all on muscle shots from underneath, and grabbed 12 rebounds. Kevin Huska added 16 points while Rich Barnes and Terry Wright each collected nine rebounds.

The turning point of the game came with little over a minute gone in the second quarter. San Ramon's 6-4 Mark Farmer scored a three-point play to close the gap to four, 22-18.

But Johnson canned a short jumper and on the succeeding San Ramon play, Porter blocked a shot and got the ball to Mike Santos who, fouled by Brad Blake, converted a pair of free throws to start a 22-9 Dublin burst that gave the Gaels a 17-point lead, and the ball game.

Mark Hutchinson was the lone bright spot for the Wolves in the latter stages of the game, scoring eight points in the final quarter, three on bombs from the top of the key.

Jim Hogeboom was, as usual, the leading scorer for San Ramon with 13 points while Hutchinson added 12.

Hill sparks Amador rout

At a special halftime ceremony Friday night, Mike Hill kissed newly crowned senior queen Tracy Shoemaker on the cheek.

Nobody could recall the last time Hill missed the mark so badly.

The senior guard, playing himself onto the All-EBAL team, and Amador perhaps, to a third straight championship, connected on eight-of-12 shots in the first half in a game with California High, and compiled some other impressive statistics in guiding the Dons to a 70-51 victory.

Hill pulled down six rebounds, three on the offensive boards, stole the ball twice from California, and dished off an assist. He finished with 20 points and a 50 per cent mark from the field. He also presented Tracy with a bouquet of roses, though they don't count chivalry at all-star time.

Hill's shooting average was doubly impressive because he never balked at firing from the $4 seats.

It was a typical night for the young 6-2 stylist who has assumed the brunt of Amador's offense, and a good portion of its defense.

Center Rob Yackley scored 16 points for Amador, and Don Hall contributed 11.

But Hill was the catalyst, however, as he's been in most of Amador's nine straight EBAL wins.

Mike is playing just his first full season as a regular for the Dons. His first starting assignment came last year in the Tournament of Champions.

An off-season of hard work, according to coach Skip Mohatt, has made Hill one of the two top guards in the league, along with Livermore's Ted Wood.

"Hill developed a lot of character in the off-season," said Mohatt Friday night. "He was the one senior on this team who played year-round and worked seriously, and we recognized that he would be our key man. He takes the responsibility, and that's what we noticed most."

"He did what he could to get the other kids in the gym, and out on the hardtop. A kid does a lot of growing up between age 16 and 17," Mohatt said. "and Mike has done his."

Hill popped for 12 points during the first quarter Friday night, enabling Amador to hold off California, 17-13. His hot hand forced the Grizzlies to shuffle three players into the opposite guard slot. Cal's Craig Cline started against Mike, and fouled him four times before the third quarter expired.

Cline finished as the Grizzlies' top gun with 15 points, though many were scored against Amador reserves. He did slip behind Hill for a couple of early baskets, however, forcing the Don captain to the sideline for a brief rest.

Hill returned in the second quarter and rifled home six straight points to open a big Amador lead.

He also tightened up on his defense, and California managed just six points in the second quarter. "To play offense as well as he does, and still play the good defense, it takes a lot of effort," said

Mohatt in praise of Hill. "Besides guarding the other team's best shooter, he has to help out a lot on defense too. When you play full court defense like that, it can take away from your offense. But he can play all three phases of the game, shooting, ball handling, and defense."

"And he's our floor leader too," Mohatt added. "He's more familiar with everything we do."

Yackley, the other senior cornerstone for the Dons, grabbed 12 rebounds against California and stopped Byron Steward with just three points. Rob suffered through a 3-for-16 night from the field, however. Ten of his points came at the foul line.

Larry Walters had 10 points for California. Amador threw up a glutinous 70 shots from the field, and connected on 24.

Wolf girls upset Gaels

San Ramon, avenging a first round 49-31 loss to Dublin, staged a final quarter rally to stun the Gaels, 40-34, in EBAL girls basketball action Thursday night.

All other games were cancelled due to road conditions and are rescheduled for Thursday, February 26.

Mary Jo Melko scored two key points to put the Wolves out in front, 34-32, but with 2:54 left on the clock, Dublin's Alicia Crumpler answered with a bucket to even up the score, 34-34. San Ramon's Nancy Kerlinger squirmed inside for a basket to give the Wolves the edge, 36-34, and Melko added four more quick points to wrap up the win. Melko canned 17 points, while Kerlinger added 12 to pace the winners. The Gaels' Joanne Callender netted 15 points, while Deanna Galant chipped in nine.

Dublin held a sluggish San Ramon junior varsity team to just two points in the second quarter while the Gaels pumped in 14 markers enroute to a 26-18 win.

Cindy Grant tallied six points for Dublin, while teammates Teddy Ottens and Lori Kretchmar each added four.

Duck cagers beat Bears

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Oregon held onto an early lead and Ron Lee contributed 23 points Saturday afternoon as the Ducks beat the California Bears 79-60 in a Pacific-8 Conference college basketball game.

Oregon outscored California 12-2, with Greg Ballard contributing seven points, midway through the first half to take a 30-15 lead with 6½ minutes remaining.

California narrowed its disadvantage to 39-30 by halftime, mostly by making 14 free throws on some of the 18 fouls committed by the aggressive Ducks in the first half.

Oregon made 12 points to California's 4 at the beginning of the first half, with Lee and teammate Mark Barwig each contributing 4, for a 53-35 lead with 14 minutes left.

The closest the Bears got after that was at 63-51 with 6½ minutes remaining after a spree in which Mark Dickey made two free throws for California and teammate Connie White added a field goal.

Lee scored five of his 23 points after that to help keep the game out of the Bear's reach.

Alcosta stars play today

The California State Soccer Association all-star game scheduled for 2 p.m. today at Robertson Park Stadium, Livermore, will feature the Alcosta Soccer League stars in an intra-league match.

Originally the Central

California Stars were scheduled to meet the Alcosta All-Stars but the former team canceled out at the last minute and another group of Valley All-Stars will compete in their place.

There is no charge of admission.

Falcon holds Poke

College Park's Jim McGuire has Fred Balovich of Livermore down in a wrestling match at the Cowboy freshman tournament yesterday in Livermore. Complete results will appear in Tuesday's Times.

Ballistic soccer teams score Division sweep

When a team falls behind in the first minute of a soccer match, sometimes it's easier to give up than try and come back.

This is not the case with Ballistic United's under-12 youth soccer team. The Pleasanton squad scored two second half goals to gain a 2-1 victory over the Dublin Paddys and crown itself the Division 111 California Youth Soccer champion yesterday at Max Baer Park in Livermore.

In other age competition the Under-14 Ballistic United squad tied with the Fremont Celtics, 1-1, but won on sudden death penalty kicks, and the Ballistic United under-10 squad took a convincing 2-0 decision over the Ballistic Centuars.

Andy Eelsing kicked the winning goal for Ballistic United's under-12 team on a penalty kick with two minutes left in the match. Eelsing also plays goalie on occasion for the United squad.

The other Ballistic goal was scored by Scott Strommer early in the second half on a five-yard shot from straight out.

The Paddys had gone into an early lead in the contest as the result of a 40-yard 'kick shot' by Andy Salmeron with less than one minute gone in the match. Salmeron broke through a group of Ballistic players and blasted in an arch, over the outtretched hands of United goalie Scott Wilcox.

Winning coach Harry Miller said Wilcox played the goalie position for his team against the Paddys because "he is taller than Eelsing and more able to block the kind of shots the Paddys use."

The Ballistic United under-14 team won in sudden death penalty kick overtime with five kicks to four for the losers. Steve Woodward, Keith McCloskey, Keith Olson, Marty Expinoza and Eric Whalen scored the penalty kicks for the winners. Expinoza got the United team's only goal in regulation time.

Steve Maciorski and Kevin Mayn scored the goals for Ballistic United's under-10 team. The winners had 16 shots on goal.

Mustangs win

Dugan took Billingsley easily, 10-0 in the 168-pound division. However, the Mustangs increased their winning total with three forfeit victories. Joel Kallman (98) and Mike Lamoureux (141) were the only other winners.

The Gaels won the junior varsity match easily, 46-6.

Indiana defeats Michigan

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Goals by Wayne Radford and Scott May gave top-ranked Indiana its first lead of the game at the 1:26 mark of overtime and the Hoosiers held for a 72-67 Big Ten college basketball victory over Michigan Saturday.

Michigan led by three points in the extra session before a layup by Radford and a jumper by May gave unbeaten Indiana, 19-0, a 68-67 advantage.

Kent Benson, whose desperation tip-in at the buzzer had forced the game into overtime, and Radford then closed the scoring with two free throws each.

Michigan seemingly had won the game in regulation play, leading by four points and holding the ball with a minute to go.

The Hoosiers closed to two points, 60-58, and got their chance to tie when May rebounded a missed Michigan free throw with 14 seconds remaining.

Bicycle riding popular sport

The energy crisis has had a lot to do with the rise in bicycle riding.

At least that's the opinion of Don Patterson, president of the Valley Spokesmen, a bicycle riding club in Dublin.

"Since the fuel crisis started more people seemed to turn to bicycling and other forms of physical activity," Patterson said. "It's a good way to exercise and have fun at the same time."

Actually, though, the Valley Spokesmen begin several years before the energy crunch. August, 1971 to be exact.

The club started with around 80 members and grew to 292 members last season. 220 people have already signed up this year.

What's the secret to the Spokesmen's success? "We are a family-oriented club," Patterson went on. "Anyone can join in. They don't have to be a resident of the valley area. We have members from places like Fremont, San Jose, even Los Angeles."

The membership fee for the club is $6 per family and $4 per individual from January to June. From July to December the fee is $3 for a family and $2 for an individual.

"During the winter we offer an average of one ride a week for the club members," Patterson said. During the summer months we try to schedule several rides per week."

The club members will sometimes travel as far as 50 miles or more on their trips. The club has gone on rides to places like Yosemite, San Francisco and Lake Tahoe. In places like this automobile transportation is needed to the starting points.

Most of the club members have 10 speed bikes. However, the children generally have sting-ray bikes with no speeds on them.

Roadster time

Cars from throughout the United States are being shipped to Oakland for the 28th annual Grand National Roadster Show Feb. 13-22.

It's scheduled at the Oakland Coliseum where more than 200 roadsters, custom cars, race cars, experimental and movie cars will be on display. The Oakland show has proved one of the most popular in the country.

Doors open from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. weekdays and noon to 11 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and Monday, Feb. 16, Washington's Birthday.

Women endorse

PLEASANTON — Ken Mercer has been endorsed for city council by the National Women's Political Caucus of Southern Alameda County.

The caucus contributed $25 to Mercer's campaign and will provide him with precinct walkers.

Local candidates Jim Jordan and Frank Brandes also were interviewed by the caucus. Brandes told The Times that he and Jordan won high praise from the Women's Caucus interviewers, but a decision had been made before the interviews to endorse only one candidate in each race. A spokesperson for NWPC was unavailable for further comment.

Staff flack

PLEASANTON — The tail is wagging the dog when it comes to city government, city council candidate Gene Finch has charged.

"We have the obvious problem of an irresponsible city manager, a misguided but zealous staff and a lethargic council which cannot or will not exercise its duty as provided for in the city charter and mandated by the people of Pleasanton," Finch said in a press release.

Finch said the recent placement last year of three firemen in administrative positions was a bad "financial as well as logistical" move.

"The people of Pleasanton can be assured of my support — my initiative — in attracting clean, light industry to our town. 'Progressive days are here again' will be more than a slogan with me. They will not come, however, though a council which sits placidly (even sleepily) by while the city manager and staff direct them in actions that are ineffective at the best and divisive at the worst.

"When I am elected to the council I will listen to the people I represent and we shall make progress as we move together. I believe the voters will elect three new councilmen on March 2 to make progress a reality rather than a cliché," said Finch.

Brandes letter

PLEASANTON — City council candidate Frank Brandes, Jr., has sent a letter to past opponents of the defunct redevelopment plan trying to enlist their support in his campaign.

In the letter, Brandes says he spoke out against the redevelopment agency at city council and redevelopment agency meetings. He says that the redevelopment plan was poorly researched and lacking viable input and implies the current city council will continue in the same pattern.

The council also failed to take the initiative in "determining your needs and desires," Brandes told the redevelopment forces. He asked for contributions, to be sent to his treasurer, Gary Duncan, 7055 Via Quito and for coffees, where the chairperson is Sandy Gunnarson, 462-2787.

Politicos talk

PLEASANTON — Three major candidates' forums remain on the docket for city council candidates.

Citizens Against Redevelopment will conduct a forum at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Pleasanton Hotel. CARD is expected to make endorsements based on the statements made at the meeting.

The League of Women Voters will sponsor a candidates' night at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 18 at Harvest Park School. Traditionally this has been attended by more citizens than any other candidates' night.

The Chamber of Commerce will split its candidates' forum into two sessions, one on Tuesday, Feb. 17, the other on Tuesday, Feb. 24 at the Pleasanton Hotel. Both sessions begin at noon.

Gene Finch, William Herlihy and Ken Mercer will speak at the first session and Roger McLain, Jim Jordan, Russ Attebery and Frank Brandes at the second parley.

Small sphere

LIVERMORE — The city's recently reduced sphere of influence was brought about by the council's "certain strict no-growth policies," charges council candidate Robert Weissel.

The Alameda County Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) Feb. 3 shrunk Livermore's sphere of influence back to its city limits.

"I believe Mr. (Don) Miller, Mr. (Glen) Dahlbacka and others have led us directly into this confrontation," states Weissel. "We have now lost large areas around the city limits which we used to have some planning control over. Because we refused to compromise, we have now lost some of our influence."

His statement continues, "If the city had followed a reasonable growth policy we might now have some say in the Las Positas Valley and other areas around our city."

"I would rather allow some planned growth that we have some control over than to lose all planning control over areas around our city."

'Get involved'

LIVERMORE — Expanding on one of his campaign themes — volunteerism — city council candidate Glen Dahlbacka states that dissatisfaction with city government and concern over high tax bills is due partly to a lack of citizen participation in local government.

"To improve this situation citizens have to realize that they must be willing, to work in a volunteer effort and provide services for themselves and one another," Dahlbacka advises.

He notes the "required human resources are available in Livermore to accomplish many of the city's necessary tasks" which are being paid for now by the city and reflected in tax bills.

"It's time for volunteerism to catch up in city government as it has in the school district," he declares.

Dahlbacka points to the "very favorable results" of recent volunteer efforts, such as the Citizens General Plan Review Committee which "collected very valuable information and opinion, saving thousands in costs to the city," and the Noise Element Committee which saved the city "tens of thousands of dollars in the preparation of the highly technical Noise Element of the General Plan."

He also notes that city soccer leagues are developing a playing field for public use with substantial savings to the community.

"These efforts have been satisfying to both the committee members and the city," Dahlbacka states. "These committees all had two things in common. The task that needed to be done was clear cut, and the timetable for its completion was not excessively long. Forming committees to solve specific problems is an effective way to increase citizen participation in city government."

"I believe many of the city's needs can be met if the necessary work is well defined. In this way we use the vast amount of talent we have in Livermore."

"Volunteerism is an important way to catch up."

Newsletter idea

PLEASANTON — City government could improve its communication with citizens by publishing a quarterly newsletter, according to city council candidate Jim Jordan.

The newsletter would inform residents of current and proposed city projects and update the financial condition of the city, said Jordan.

"If such a publication had been underway before the ill-fated redevelopment proposal was too far along, the city could have saved the taxpayers considerable funds. The Pleasanton Redevelopment Agency could have had projects underway or, more likely, the council could have dissolved the agency a year and a half sooner. 'The net savings would have been tremendous, enough perhaps for the salary of an additional firefighter or policeman,'" said Jordan.

Not all local residents read newspapers so there "has to be a constant flow of information to people and a newsletter is the best approach," said Jordan.

"Another way to keep in constant communication is to hold quarterly Community Congresses where citizens would have the opportunity to voice their opinions, suggestions and solutions to community problems and hear the city administration's views on city matters," he said.

As an example of the power of communication, Jordan cited a post card mailer campaign conducted by Citizens Against Redevelopment. The campaign produced more than 1450 postcards with more than 2,000 names. Jordan credited it with convincing the council that the PRA should be dissolved.

P&F candidate

Albert Sargis of Oakland has taken out "petition in lieu of filing fee" papers for the 9th Congressional District seat, the Alameda County Registrar reported Friday.

Sargis will run on the Peace and Freedom party line. He joins James K. Mills, a Livermore Republican, in challenging incumbent Pete Stark.

Sargis must collect the signatures of 3,000 registered voters in the district to have the $446.25 fee waived.

Public safety

PLEASANTON — City council candidate Ken Mercer's response to the recent controversy over partial merger of the police and fire departments is the creation of a public safety commission.

"I feel a commission composed of citizens should be developed to monitor all areas of public safety," he stated. "The commission could be charged with thoroughly studying the public safety department concept."

"They could look at other communities who have working public safety departments and also at communities who have abandoned the concept and see if Pleasanton has anything in common," he said. "Perhaps we can learn from other people's mistakes," Mercer emphasized.

"The commission could also study other sources of funding the additional fire suppression people needed. I feel this could be a very worthwhile commission who could make recommendations on all aspects of Pleasanton's safety," he stated.

"I feel it should be started and all interested citizens should be allowed to apply and be interviewed for selection," said Mercer.

Brandes brunch

PLEASANTON — Frank Brandes will have a champagne brunch from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. today as a fundraiser. For more information, call Sue Aubuchon, 462-1807, Cheryl Duncan, 846-9080, or Mary Ann Wagerman, 462-1330.

SR city move

Supervisor Edmund Linscheid (center) accepted an intent to circulate petitions from Norm Roberts (left) and John Meakin, members of Taxpayers for Local Control Through Incorporation Thursday, enabling TLC members to begin collecting signatures for the incorporation drive in the San Ramon Valley. Petitioners hope to collect 6,000 signatures to place the cityhood proposal on the Nov. 2 ballot. Persons desiring to help circulate petitions can contact John Meakin at 829-3795 for information on a training session set for Tuesday, Feb. 17 at 7:30 p.m. at California High School. Donations supporting the incorporation drive can be made to TLC, P.O. Box 945, Danville.

Electronic realtors' Bay Area ranks grow

Howard Sumerlin, area director for ERA (Electronic Realty Associates), announces that the following firms have recently joined the organization: All American Realty, Concord; Allied Brokers, Walnut Creek; Lee Grabel Realty, Alamo; Homes West, Pinole; Kenworthy Realty, Concord; King Realty, Concord; Miramonte Realty, Orinda and Berkeley, and Bob Anderson Realty, Dublin.

ERA is a growing nation-wide network of professional real estate brokers offering modern electronic photo - listing services to clients. ERA has national headquarters in Kansas City. ERA is the originator of the photo - by - wire concept of finding homes currently for sale in distant cities.

As a member of the ERA system, which now serves virtually every major population center in the nation, the Bay Area is linked to other ERA member brokers coast - to - coast. Electronic data transmission equipment in the organization's broker offices can receive photos and descriptions of the current listings of any of the more than 600 other ERA member brokers.

"The ERA system marks a real breakthrough in the real estate field," commented Sumerlin. "Membership in the ERA system now enables residents of the Bay Area that are facing a long distance move, to inspect homes available for sale in their new town before actually visiting the town. Using the ERA system can often save a transferring family many days and hundreds of dollars in expense."

For people planning a move from the Bay Area, the ERA system works like this: A representative of ERA will talk with the relocating family to determine the size, price and type of home in which the family is interested. He then feeds this information to ERA via the ERA "moving machine."

Personnel at ERA headquarters in Kansas City then consult the computer-managed photo - listing inventory for property in the new town that generally meets the requirements of the transferring family.

In about six minutes, the ERA "moving machine" will complete a data transmission back to the Bay Area broker, and a sheet with pictures and descriptions of six homes currently for sale in the new town will be handed to the interested family.

"It's a fantastic system," says Sumerlin, "a family moving from here to Denver, Tampa, Chicago or any of hundreds of other cities, can come into our member offices, and within a few minutes be looking at photos and descriptions of homes in their new city."

People that list their homes for sale with an ERA member broker benefit from the ERA system because their home is entered into the ERA listing inventory and then becomes available to families moving to the Bay Area.

"Nothing like ERA has ever been made available before in the Bay Area," says Sumerlin. "Our brokers are proud to be able to provide the ERA service to the Bay Area. There is no extra charge for the benefits of ERA, regardless of whether you are moving out of the area or selling your home locally."

ERA offers its member brokers the "Buyers Protection Plan," a home warranty program provided by Homeowners Repair Services, Inc., a subsidiary of ERA. Now being offered to home sellers and buyers in many parts of the nation, the "Buyers Protection Plan" pays for the repair or replacement of certain essential home components that fail any time during a 12-month period after the date of closing.

The "Buyers Protection Plan" covers the central heating system — all plumbing systems and equipment except toilet seats — the entire sheet metal duct work system within the home — the entire electrical system — all types of water heaters — central and window air conditioning systems — all built-in appliances.

This exciting home warranty contract is growing in popularity with sellers, who can look to a faster sale of their home, and with buyers who can expect 12 months of cost-free repairs on any of the covered components or systems.

Council plans First Street realignment

LIVERMORE — In an effort to avoid an "uproar" over the proposed First Street realignment and overpass project, the city council plans to hold informational hearings for area residents soon.

The council last week unanimously voted to adopt resolutions authorizing the city to enter into agreements with the two railroads involved, the Southern Pacific Transportation Company and the Western Pacific Railroad Company, and hopes to receive funding for the project from the state Department of Transportation during fiscal year 1976-77.

A total of 10 per cent of the project will be funded by the railroad companies; 80 per cent by the state, and 10 per cent by the city.

According to city staff reports, Livermore's share of the project already has been expended through land acquisitions amounting to approximately $150,000 made with gas tax monies.

The project will widen and realign First Street southerly from around Maple Street to around where Cactus Jack's restaurant is located. An overpass will take traffic across the railroad tracks.

Access to the realigned street will be provided for the Jensen homes residences south of First Street by extending the Fourth Street - Madeira Way - School Street junction.

However, the project also will "stub off" parts of the existing First Street and alter the access to the street now enjoyed through the use of Junction and Martin avenues.

The council hearings primarily are for those residents north of First Street whose traffic patterns will be changed.

Councilwoman Helen Tirsell explained last week she was "very concerned" about the stubbing off of First Street. "Imagine the uproar when people north of First Street find their access to town cut off," she said and suggested public hearings although not required by law — be held.

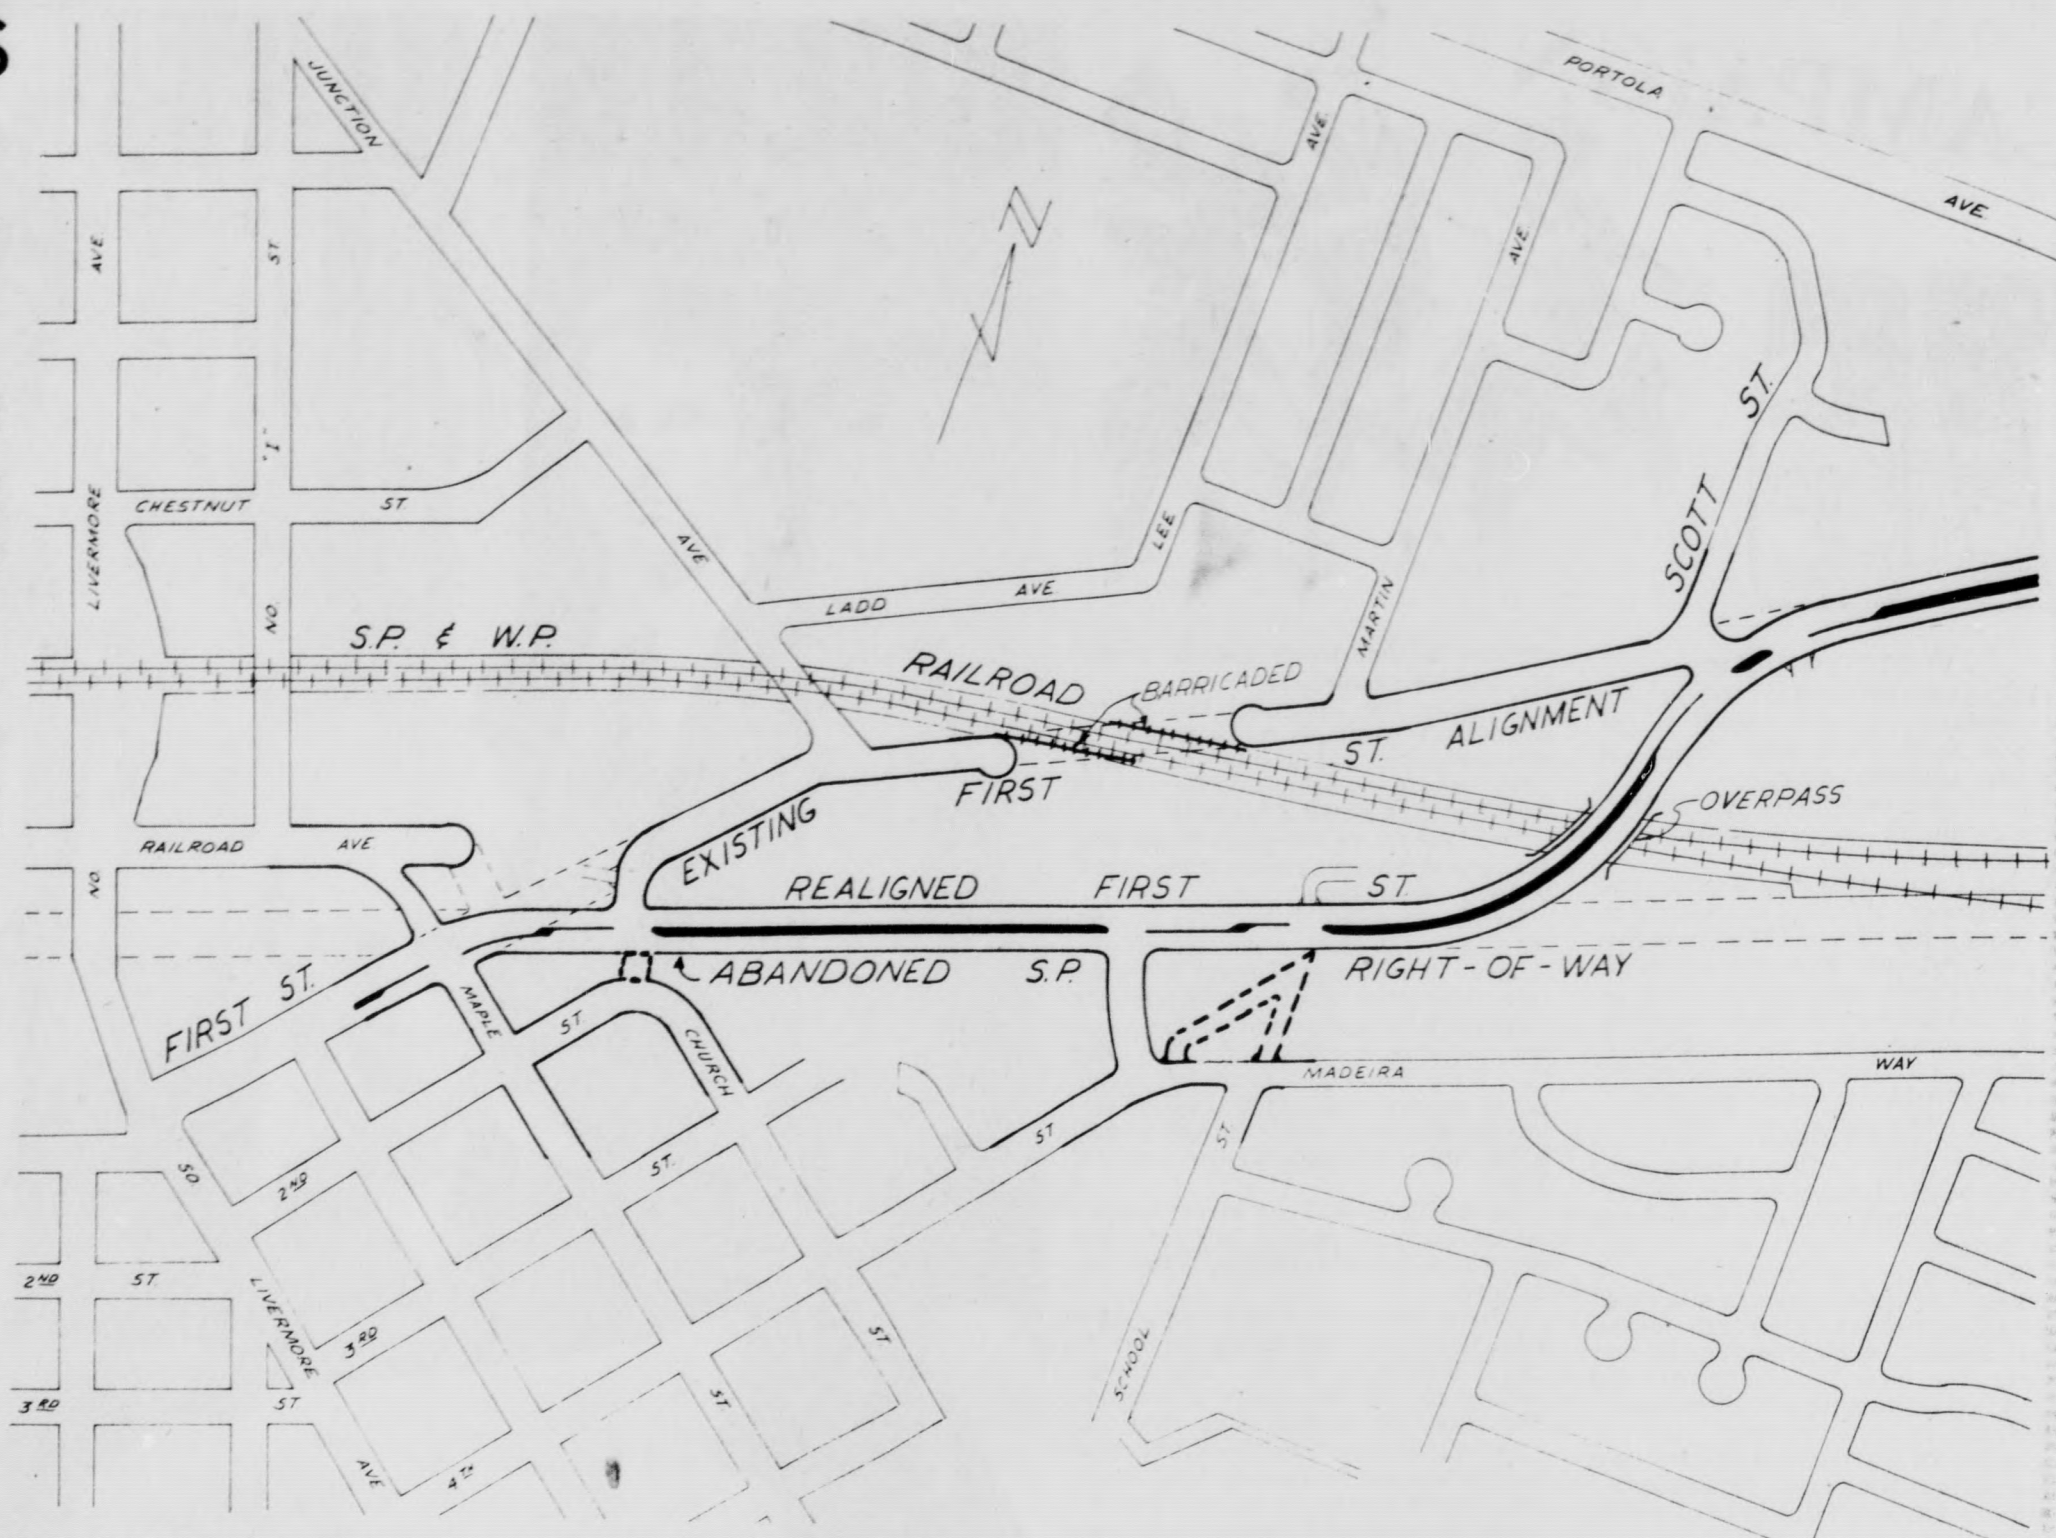

The council agreed unanimously.

Public Works Director Dan Lee assured the council the project would be advantageous to those residents because of improved noise conditions and better for the city as a whole since safety would be enhanced by traffic avoiding crossing the railroad tracks at grade level.

Tirsell said she thought city residents would support the project if they heard about it and added "the staff and city council can sit up here and plan what's best for the city, but if the city doesn't know about it, it won't fly."

She also praised the area residents north of First Street as a "very active neighborhood" and one that does its "homework" before attending public hearings.

Notices will be distributed to residents both north and south of the stretch of First Street to be realigned telling them of the city's plans and council's hearing date.

This map shows the present alignment of First Street in Livermore and the proposed new route if an overpass is constructed at the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks.

Aftershock hits—toll 14,000

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — A powerful aftershock spread panic through the battered streets of Guatemala City on Friday just two days after a killer earthquake hit the nation, leaving at least 5,000 dead by official count. Unofficial death toll estimates ranged as high as 14,000.

Reports from the interior said entire villages were razed by Wednesday's quake and starving survivors were feeding on rats.

Reports from Mexico City and the U.S. Geological Survey said a "major aftershock" struck Guatemala shortly after noon (1 p.m. EST) Friday. The reports said the tremor registered between 5.75 and 6 on the Richter scale, far less than the 7.5 reported for Wednesday's quake but still considered sufficient to cause "severe damage."

The tremor was the hardest of about 60 aftershocks that have rattled Guatemala since Wednesday.

It crumpled buildings that had been weakened but left standing by the big quake and thousands of people ran into the streets in panic. Several sections of the historic Metropolitan Cathedral, already badly damaged, collapsed.

The United States and other nations and international relief agencies launched massive aid efforts, but getting the food, medicine, water and manpower to the hardest hit regions outside Guatemala City was made nearly impossible by landslides and collapsed bridges.

"They're eating rats and anything else they can get their hands on," a Guatemalan Red Cross official said of the devastated interior. Authorities said the hardest hit regions stretched across three-fourths of this nation of 6 million.

The National Emergency Committee reported that in addition to the 5,000 dead, 15,000 had been injured and at least 200,000 were homeless.

Caritas, the Roman Catholic aid organization, said its reports indicated at least 14,000 had been killed and 40,000 injured.

The Guatemalan Red Cross estimated 8,000 dead while the U.N. Disaster Relief Organization in Geneva said its field reports indicated nearly 6,000 killed.

"You've got to get the word out to the world that the situation is very grave in Guatemala," implored Rene A. Flores, the Caritas relief coordinator. "World opinion has got to be convinced."

Guillermo Echeverria Vielmann, coordinator of the emergency committee, said 1,000 soldiers and about 900 military cadets had been assigned to distribute relief supplies, but most of the aid was going to stricken areas in the capital city because there was no way to get it out to the countryside.

Echeverria said the bridges at Aguacaliente and Belice were impassable, making it impossible for traffic to reach Guatemala City from its main Atlantic ports of Barrios and Santo Tomas de Castiljo.

"The backbone of Guatemalan commerce has been broken," he said.

The Red Cross said it took six hours to get to El Progreso, a town usually within a 45-minute drive of Guatemala City. A spokesman said the only route open to the town was through Honduras.

No cathedral here

Looking like the Chartres Cathedral under construction, scaffolding covers the high arches of the new Pleasanton post office on Santa Rita Road near Valley Avenue. Pre-stressed concrete walls were put in place a few weeks ago and now they are being buttressed. (Times Photo)

Heart group launches drive

The Alameda County Heart Association has set a county-wide goal of $100,000 for its 1976 Heart Fund Drive, according to Mrs. Levon Sherman, Valley Chairman for the campaign.

The annual fund-raising appeal is held throughout the county in February to raise funds for educational and community service programs of the Heart Association, as well as to support heart disease research done nationally and throughout the Bay Area.

Mrs. Sherman, along with Mrs. James Sievers and Mrs. Billy Byrd of Pleasanton, and Mrs. Floyd Suggen, Dorothy Branum and Sally Ruduzco of Livermore, have organized hundreds of Valley residents who will visit their neighbors during February on behalf of the Heart Fund.

The volunteers will collect contributions and distribute a special leaflet which gives the early warning signs of heart attack.

"Over a half million Americans will die from heart attacks this year," said Mrs. Sherman. "Many of them could be saved if people were more aware of the symptoms of a heart attack and what to do if they occur."

The Heart Association notes these warning signs:

- Prolonged, squeezing pain or discomfort in center of chest.
  - Pain may spread to shoulder, arm, neck or jaw.
  - Sweating, nausea, vomiting or shortness of breath.
- The Association warns that if you have these warning signs of a heart attack, get to a hospital emergency room at once.
- Mrs. Sherman appealed to Valley residents to give generously to support the campaign.

Cobra has appeal

Cobra II - a sporty version of the Mustang II with a name reminiscent of high performance GT cars and celebrated road courses - gives added youth appeal to Ford Division's 1976 model lineup.

The Cobra name has been associated with Ford since the early 1960's, when Carroll Shelby mated a Ford V-8 engine and a British sports car. The hybrid roadster was called a Cobra and was sold through selected Ford dealerships. Race versions of the Cobra swept to the World Manufacturers' GT Championships in 1965.

Based on the Mustang fastback, Cobra II fits into the lineup in much the same way as the Shelby Mustang GT did shortly after the original Mustang was introduced in 1964.

Modifications that convert the Mustang into a Cobra II are done by Motortown Corporation, Dearborn, Mich., company, to Ford specifications. Cobra IIs are available in two color combinations - white with blue accent stripes and fender emblem, and bright metallic blue with white accent stripes and fender emblems. The unique double stripes are centered and travel full length from front to rear bumper as did the stripes on the Shelby Mustang GT.

Cobra emblems are affixed to the front fenders, and a bright, diecast cobra emblem is centered on the blacked-out grille. Cobra appliques also appear on the centers of the standard styled-steel wheels and the optional forged-aluminum wheels.

The high-performance image of the Cobra II is heightened by front and rear-deck spoilers.

Adventist

LIVERMORE — You say, "No one ever does something for nothing?" "You'd be surprised," says Pastor Robert Becker of the Livermore Seventh-day Adventist Church.

Becker reports that sixty-four persons from the church donated over 274 hours of free labor in various projects during 1975. If they had all been paid the current federal minimum wage of $2.10 per hour, their labor would have been worth the staggering sum of $575.40.

Among these activities were community service, school-aged Pathfinders engaged in activities, transportation and other helps to the elderly, laymen conducting 5-day

Plans to Stop Smoking, weight control class, investment projects, public evangelistic crusade series, and others involved in personal evangelism and Bible study.

Something for nothing?

"Not really," says Becker. Our people get something more valuable than money from doing this work. They get the satisfaction of serving their God in heaven and their brothers and sisters on earth."
